Quebec Meeting Expected To Bring Shattering Attack on China Sea Area.

BULLETIN

QUEBEC —(U P— Announcement that Australian representation was being added to the Quebec conferences today focused new attention on the absence of Russia, now the only one of the big Allied fighting powers without a representative in the war talks led by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

(By Associated Press)

QUEBES—The belated arrival of Chinese Foreign Minister T. V. Soong at the Quebec war councils suggested today that decisions had been made to build up air squadrons in China to bomb enemy life lines in the China sea and the Japanese mainland itself

Soong flew in from Washington late yesterday, at the request of President Roosevelt. Presidential Secretary Stephen Early emphasized that his discussions with the chief executive and Prime Minister Churchill of Britain "will have to do with the plans for the war on Japan."

Pure logic, and these additional facts, also weighed in favor of an agreement to wreck the enemy supply route in the China sea and give Japan a sample of the destruction already heaped on ports and industrial cities of Germany.

1. President Roosevelt has proclaimed publicly the determination of the Allies to send up aerial armadas from China to scourge the Japanese.

2 China is known to have asked that the bomber force now operating in her eastern zone be increased perhaps 10 times for exactly that purpose.

3. A resurvey of air transport facilities operating out of India is said to have shown it would be possible to supply and service three to four times the number of bombers recently in eastern China.

4 If the war is to be brought to bear on Japan itself, she is most vulnerable to attacks from the west, where heavy bombers can make the round trip from China.

5. The blasting of Japanese shipping out of the China sea would

Tumble Into Pail Of Boiling Water Fatal To Boy, 3

Burns received when he toppled backward into a pail of boiling water at his home Saturday afternoon, today had claimed the life of three-year-old Larry Tugend, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Tugend, of near Perrysville.

He died Sunday at 12:15 at Mansfield General hospital hospital where he had been taken after the accident. The boy suffered major burns on his back, abdomen and legs when he fell into a bucket of water which his mother had prepared for scalding chickens.

Surviving are his parents, a brother, Donovan, and a sister, Marilyn, both at home, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Tugend of Loudonville He was born March 18, 1940.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. at St. John's Lutheran church in Perrysville with Rev. George M. Schrack in charge. Burial will be in Bellville cemetery. The body will be taken from the Byerly funeral home to the Tugend residence Monday evening.

J.A.C. Seeks $1,000 Fund For 'Club'

In an effort to raise $1,000 for their proposed "dry night club" for Mansfield's teen-age youngsters, the Junior Association of Commerce today contacted 30 civic organizations to enlist their financial aid in the project.

Of the amount sought, J. A. C. officials said $350 would be used to put the building on Park avenue east into usable condition and the remaining $650 for the first three months operating expenses.

Robert LeFevre, who is heading the drive, said today participation in the project would not be limited to club organizations although they were the only ones contacted by letter today A $100 contribution has already been received, he said.

Last week the Junior Chamber rented a building on Park avenue east formerly occupied by the Playtime and have already begun to clean-up job as the first step toward getting the recreation center open early in September.

Pupils in the last four grades of school will be admitted to the recreation center according to present plans School officials at Mansfield Senior high Johnny Appleseed and John Simpson junior high schools and Madison high have been contacted and asked to appoint two students each to a board which will set up the governing rules for the center.

The "dry night club" project is a result of increasing civic concern over juvenile delinquency and is the first of many proposed projects to bear fruit.

HIT AGAIN

Police Department To Lose 2 More Men To Army.

With four members of the Mansfield police department already in the armed forces and two more expected to be called in September, Police Chief Meade K. Bates today was faced with the problem of finding enough replacements to keep his department adequately manned.

Patrolman John E. Steel will leave early in September to start his army training and Patrolman Carl E. Beard, who is serving under a temporary appointment as a replacement for another officer who was inducted, is expected to be called next month, Bates said.

The police department already has three vacancies and the number will be boosted to five when Steel and Beard leave. Bates said he anticipated a civil service examination soon to establish a new police eligibility list.

Soldier Shot As He Lights Candle At Church Service

(By Associated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO—The crack of a pistol shot punctuated the close of Father Lokis' sermon of the mass yesterday at the Greek Orthodox Church of the Annunciation.

The startled priest looked toward the back of the church in time to see a soldier slump to the floor A man with a gun jumped across the soldier's body ran down the stairs and out of sight

Some men in the congregation carried the mortally wounded man from the church. Father Lokis stepped aside as assistant priests ended the service with an unhurried ritual.

Enroute to a hospital in an ambulance, the soldier, Pvt. Edward P. Daphne, 27, died, a bullet in his brain.

The man who ran out of the church gun in hand was Peter Raftopoulos 52 said Police Inspector Harry Huston.

He drove across town to the hall of justice and outside approached Patrolman Harry Gurtler with the announcement, Gurtler said, that, "I just killed a man—I killed him because he broke up my home."

Daphne had entered the church with three friends, kissed a painting of the madonna and was lighting a votive candle at a candelabra when the bullet struck.

Raftopoulos was sitting in a rear pew. He noticed Daphne come in quietly walked up to him, pointed the gun and fired, Husted declared.

Raftopoulos is a tavern owner. His wife, Mary 27, a school days friend of Daphne, is suing for divorce

At the city jail Raftopoulos was booked on a murder charge and held without bail

Lewis Accepts WLB Bid To Discuss Hard Coal Wage.

WASHINGTON – (AP) – John L. Lewis accepted an invitation to appear before the War Labor board today as that tribunal—fortified with a new financial club for dealing with defiant unions and employers—stepped into the anthracite wage dispute

Spokesmen for Lewis said the head of the United Mine Workers would leave most of the talking to Thomas Kennedy, his secretary-treasurer, who quit the WLB last spring in a disagreement with its policies.

WLB called the hearing on the plea of the anthracite operators that they had been unable to reach an agreement on a new contract after 20 weeks of negotiations in New York involving approximately 80,000 hard coal miners.

Youths Drive At 85 To Keep 'Dates' But Police Interfere

Three teen age Akron youths drove at 85 miles an hour to "meet three Mansfield girls" yesterday but failed to keep their dates.

They were arrested by state highway patrolmen on U. S. Route 42 between Ashland and Mansfield after a patrol cruiser chased them for five miles.

Officers found they had taken the auto from an Akron garage where it had been left for repairs.

The driver of the car told officers that he had "just borrowed" the car from his father's repair shop in Akron. He said the owner was to call for the car today and that he "intended to have it back by that time."

One of the boys admitted taking cash from his father's bill fold.

Today, the boys are in custody of Summit county juvenile authorities and their Mansfield friends are probably disappointed

No charge had been filed against the youths today.

INJURED AS CAR CRASHES BRIDGE

Man, 70, In Critical Condition After Being Trapped In Auto; Driver In Jail.

Andrew Pfeifer, 70, Mansfield R D 3 was in a critical condition today at General hospital suffering from a fractured skull and lacerations of the face sustained in an accident early Sunday morning on the Lexington-Springmill road. He was trapped in an overturned car.

Pfeifer and William Slisher, Mansfield R. D. 1, the driver of the car, were returning home from Mansfield where they had spent Saturday evening when the accident occurred.

Driving south on the Lexington-Springmill road a half mile south of Springmill, Slisher lost control of the car and it rammed into a steel bridge railing on the left hand side of the road and overturned, county officers said.

Slisher was not hurt in the accident but Pfeifer was pinned inside the car Sheriff Frank E Robinson, summoned to the scene of the accident, with the help of several residents of near-by homes righted the car before they were able to get the injured man out.

Slisher was taken to the county jail where he is being held pending the filing of charges against him, the sheriff said

Employes Of City Await Council's Move on Pay Hike

The committee representing city employes in their campaign for pay increases today was waiting for city council to make the next move to arrange a meeting of the two groups to renew their discussion of the salary question.

Pleased with the council committee's decision to take up the pay request again, Fire Capt. Frank R. Stahl, chairman of the city workers committee, said he would wait "a couple of days for word from council before we do anything else."

C. N. Schultz, chairman of the joined committee appointed to study the pay boost request, said last week that council would

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The navy disclosed today that American and Canadian troops had made a landing on Segula island in the Aleutians indicating that the Allies are combing the Aleutians island by island in an attempt to run down Japs who escaped from Kisko.

(By Associated Press)

Allied siege guns blasted the Japanese stronghold at Salamaua in New Guinea today as enemy troops retreated deeper into their last circle of defenses, and dispatches from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said the fall of the big air base appeared almost within sight

From newly captured ridge positions, American and Australian gunners turned their fire on the enemy at a range of only two miles, and Allied troops moved up all along the semi-circular front.

Meanwhile, United Nations military chiefs agreed that the bloodless conquest of Kiska in the Aleutians had placed the Allies on the shortest route to Tokyo.

"The Jap is on the run," said Lieut. Gen. John L. DeWitt, commander of the western defense command.

"The Jap navy is in hiding, dispersed. The reoccupation of Kiska has cleared our shortest highway to the Japanese empire"

Similar expressions broadly hinting that the Allies may be poised to strike heavy blows against Japan came from Vice-Admiral Thomas C Kinkaid, commander in the North Pacific, and Maj. Gen. William O. Butler commander of the 11th army air force.

"We have completed our north-

BONUS STARTS

Longer Liquor Ration Period Opens, Offers Extra Bottle.

COLUMBUS -- (U.P) — A new liquor ration period opened today and will run through September. In addition to the usual allowance of two pints, one fifth or one quart of whisky, each registered purchaser may buy a similar amount of rum, brandy or cordials during the period, but all purchases must be made at one time

The "dividend," the first declared since state liquor rationing began early this summer, was made possible by accumulation of rum, cordial and brandy supplies and the fac that the new period will be 11 days longer than the first three four-week periods.

Henceforth ration periods will coincide with calendar months.

Legislator Urges Canada to Defer Pulpwood Cutters.

QUEBEC (AP) The paper shortage threat "can be solved in 48 hours if American and Canadian officials will show a spirit of co-operation" toward manpower problems, asserts Rep. Clarence Brown, Blanchester, O., Republican.

Brown is a member of a congressional committee meeting Canadian officials to discuss the lack of paper in both countries.

The Ohioan urged that Canadian officials give a deferred draft status to pulpwood cutters as the United States has done. He also advocated use of war prisoners to cut the logs that are going into pulp and made into paper.

Open Ukraine For Russian Dnieper Drive

Fall Of City, Admitted By Germans After Two-Week Campaign, Gives Reds Key Communications Post; Bryansk Thrust Slowed.

(By United Press)

LONDON—German troops have evacuated Kharkov, Russia's fourth largest city, a Nazi broadcast said today, throwing open the Ukraine for a Russian thrust to the Dnieper.

An official DNB agency broadcast quoted the international information bureau, a Nazi propaganda agency, that Axis forces had withdrawn from Kharkov "according to plan after destroying all war-important installations."

The evacuation was completed last night, it said.

Though the Russians have been engaged in some of the fiercest fighting of the whole summer campaign in the northern and northeastern outskirts of Kharkov during the past 10 days, the German broadcast asserted that the evacuating forces were "not hard pressed by the Soviets."

"Since the city several times has changed hands, it no longer is a center of traffic and supply in its present condition," the broadcast continued in an effort to minimize the loss of the most important Axis base between Bryansk and the Sea of Azov.

"By this disengaging movement German positions have been considerably shortened and improved."

It was expected that Russia would announce the re-capture of Kharkov in a special communique tonight.

The German evacuation came only a little more than two weeks after the start of the Soviet summer offensive in this sector and held promise of an intensified drive toward the Dnieper river, the next big natural defense line to the west.

Soviet flanking columns already have reached 70 miles to the west to within 24 miles north of Poltava, railroad junction 55 miles northeast of the Dnieper.

Russian forces southeast of Kharkov already have begun a companion drive to wipe out a German salient anchored on the Donets and Mius rivers and reaching the Sea of Azov at Taganrog, west of Rostov

After seizing bridgeheads on the west banks of both the Donets and the Mius, the Red army smashed ahead yesterday in a new attack southwest of Voroshilovgrad, 170 miles southwest of Kharkov, captured several villages, killed 3,000 German infantrymen, destroyed 40 tanks and shot down 21 Axis planes in aerial combat.

The fall of Kharkov ranks with the capture of Orel as the greatest victory of the Russian summer offensive, which already has cost the Germans 1,000,000 men in dead and wounded and enormous amounts of tanks, planes and guns.

The Red army captured Kharkov last Feb. 16 after a 300-mile march from Stalingrad, but lost it to a German counter-offensive a month later.

London military observers believed the Germans now would fall back steadily behind stubborn rear guard resistance while massing reserves along the Dnieper in the hopes of launching another powerful counter-offensive.

The Russians probably will advance as far as Poltava, 80 miles southwest of Kharkov, with but little difficulty, then encounter steadily-stiffening resistance as they near the Dnieper river line.

Occupation of Kharkov will give the Russians control of an important hub of communications

CRUSHED: Aerial Juggernaut Leaves Salerno Sea Of Flame

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—The mighty Allied aerial juggernaut rolled over Salerno, another important point in the Italian mainland railroad system, virtually smashing the city in day and night raids and leaving marshalling yards a sea of flame, headquarters announced today.

Salerno is on the coast south of Naples, around which Allied heavy and medium bombers left a trail of ruin at railway centers in raids Friday and Saturday.

In the Salerno raids, American Marauders battled their way through increasingly strong fighter opposition. Flying with escort, they shot down 28 of the enemy.

The German air force was reported to have put nearly 100 fighters into the sky.

In the heavy air fighting of the past four days, 109 enemy planes have been downed, it was announced officially. The Marauder squadrons in Sunday raids destroyed 28, topping the 22 shot down by these bombers Saturday in the Naples area.

While the northwest African forces were slashing at Salerno, British Liberators and Halifaxes from the Middle East bombed Italian rail switching yards Saturday at Crotone, a port on the arch of the Italian boot.

Seven Allied aircraft were reported missing from the Saturday night and Sunday raids, two of

RESHUFFLE: Expect Standley To Be Recalled From Moscow

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON — (INS) — In the tense diplomatic situation caused by Russia's sudden withdrawal of its top ambassadors from Washington and London, Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles today mysteriously left the capital for an unannounced destination.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—"D. C. Speaker" predicted today that Ambassador William H. Standley would return soon from his Moscow post, thereby completing the reshuffle of Soviet-United States diplomatic representation.

But Speaker, the unofficial capital authority, emphasized that a sharp distinction should be drawn between Standley's retirement as ambassador to Russia and the withdrawal of Maxim Litvinoff as Soviet ambassador to the United States.

"The replacement of Litvinoff at Washington, coming so soon after the withdrawal of Ambassador Maisky from London, doubtless was dictated by reasons of international policy fully known only to Joseph Stalin," Speaker said.

"On the contrary, Standley, the salty retired admiral, has wanted to quit for some time. His friends were aware of this long before Litvinoff went home. His reasons are personal and not, in contrast

HELL AND HIGH WATER

By William McLeod Raine

(Copyright, 1943)

CHAPTER II

Jake caught Sam by the arm and pulled him to his feet. Followed by the rest of his gang, he strode to the cottonwoods, mounted, and rode away.

Sugg decided that as far as Miss Broderick and he were concerned the dance was over. He notified the other couple who had come with them in the surrey.

As he helped Willie May into the rig she noticed that the knuckles of his right hand were skinned.

"You hurt your hand," she said.

"Ran it against a block of wood."

"You had trouble with the Hickorys," she persisted.

"No trouble. I told them they had better go home—and they went."

Merrill strolled over to Bob as the boy watched the surrey disappear. "That outfit will do you a meanness—you and Cle both."

J. A. Broderick sat on the porch of the white ranch house talking with Spud Chandler the newly-arrived foreman of his Texas spread, a grizzled oldtimer who had come several hundred miles to report and to receive instructions. Broderick was what the wind and the sun and the tough frontier had made him. A powerfully built man in his late forties, his clothes were as weatherworn as those of his most careless rider. The boots resting on the porch rail were run down at the heels, one leg of the jean trousers had caught at the top of the boot. Keen grey eyes looked out of a strong leathery face. His voice had the Texas drawl, but it carried a ring of authority. Nobody tried to "run a sandy" on the J A B boss.

"Better send Lee back with me to Lampasas," the foreman suggested.

Broderick grunted. "Fine. If he would go. But the young lunkhead won't see it that way. Says the Hickorys can't run him outa the country. I like his spunk. Hell and high water couldn't of driven me out either at his age."

"Or now," the foreman added.

"This country is twenty years behind the times," the boss explained. "It needs Texas Rangers to clean out the bad men."

"I don't rightly understand it," Spud replied. "You got sheriffs and police and U. S. marshals. Why don't they blast all these galawags off'n the map?"

J. A. explained the legal setup. Each of the five civilized tribes was an entity in itself. It had its own courts, officers, and legislative assemblies. Their authority was final over the citizens of the Nation except in controversies with whites, whose cases were referred to Judge Parker's court at Fort Smith, Arkansas. The Indian police could arrest whites but only to turn them over to United States marshals.

"Business of passing the buck," Spud commented.

"Trouble is we outsiders have no rights in the Nation, though we outnumber the Choctaws three to one," Broderick grumbled. "A white man can't vote. If he builds a house it is not his. A town grows, and the folks in it don't own their own homes. All they can do is lease from the Nation. They pay taxes, and get nothing in return—"

"Looks like we need another revolutionary war," voiced Spud.

"The Choctaws have rights too," Broderick admitted. "This is their country. We didn't have to butt in here. They are a quiet peaceable people, with a heap more respect for law than all these desperadoes who have flocked in and are raising cane. Take the Hickorys. They are bad medicine, rotten through and through."

Bob Lee rode up and swung down from the saddle. "Wire cutters have been busy at the south pasture," he told them. "They rode in and out again."

"Driving some of our stuff?" Broderick asked.

"No, sir. I cut sign right careful. No cattle went through the gap. The sons of guns picked the wrong night. Only yesterday we pushed the stock up into the big pasture."

"Good. How many of the scoundrels would you figure from the tracks?"

"Four or five, I'd say."

"Yore friends the Hickorys?" hazarded Spud with a wry grin.

"Might be," the owner of the J A B admitted. "Likely we'll never know."

"The tracks were fresh," Bob contributed.

"Glad you didn't meet them. Stick close to this end of the ranch, boy, you and Cle both. Spud agrees with me that you'd better go back to Lampasas. I don't like this set-up."

Bob grinned. "I'm gonna live fifty years yet. The bullet hasn't been molded that will kill me."

The cattleman let his gaze rest on Lee, a gay and cocksure youngster who walked unafraid. His broad-brimmed white hat was jauntily tilted to one side. The tough neck muscles sloped to muscular shoulders. In his poised repose there was the promise of perfect coordination of mind and body. The ranchman thought that he would have liked to father a son like him.

"You're staying at yore own risk, son," he said.

"Every time you fork a pitching bronc it's at yore own risk, but you don't stay off them," Bob responded cheerfully.

"That Hickory outfit is plumb poison. Lucky somebody wasn't killed. I hear Hiram Sugg got mixed in the thing."

Bob grinned. "He was the whole show. I misjudged him, Mr. Broderick. He's kinda plump and pink-faced. Looks soft but you ought to of seen him knock Sam Hickory stemwinding."

"Sugg did?" the cattleman asked, astonished.

"Yes, sirree."

"And the Hickorys—what did they do?"

"Took it—like lambs. The whole bunch of them. Jake looked like he would start something, but Mr. Sugg just stood and gave him the eye. Faced Jake down."

Broderick was pleased. "I didn't know Sugg was that tough," he chuckled.

Willie May came to the porch with a pitcher of lemonade and two glasses. She had seen Bob coming but showed proper surprise.

"I'll get another glass," she volunteered.

The day was hot and sultry. Bob accepted the cool drink gratefully, but it did not cool the excitement that her appearance had started drumming in his veins.

"Did you see those Hickorys again after we left the dance?" she asked.

"No. I expect I could have found them if I had gone hunting for them."

"I've been telling him to stay away from that trash," Broderick mentioned to his daughter. "They are a bunch of bad hombres."

"They are," Willie May agreed emphatically. "One of them looked as if he was going to eat up Bob."

"I hadn't ought to have let you go to that dance," her father replied. "I knew it all the time, and I let you talk me into it."

"But I had such a careful chaperone," she told her parent with smiling malice. "Bob was a nice old grandmother to me. He scolded me and said I ought to be at home tucked in bed."

Bob felt the color beating into his cheeks. "I didn't say that Miss Willie May."

"Don't let anything she says worry you, Bob," the cattleman cut in. "I didn't paddle her enough when she was little.

Willie May did some blushing herself and flitted into the house.

Broderick rubbed an unshaven chin helplessly. "Fact is a father doesn't know how to bring up a girl right," he explained. "You can't wear her to a frazzle like you can a son. Ever since I lost her mother I've been spoiling Willie May."

Bob thought that if she was spoiled that was the way he liked her, but left with his own opinion unexpressed.

Professor Gives His Recipes For A Happy Marriage

STATE COLLEGE —(INS)— The war has brought to light many unusual weddings via telephone, telegraph, and proxy, but while there are many ways of getting married, there's only one way to make it last, advises Dr. M. E. John, sociology professor at Pennsylvania State college.

The best marriages are those in which the husband and wife do not have too many interests in common, he said. "When couples do too much together, they have too much on which to disagree," he explained. Dr. John also prescribed the following formula for a happy wedded life:

1. Get the blessings of the parents to avoid mother-in-law trouble.
2. Have a moderately long engagement, with opportunity for social activity.
3. Love your mate more than your family.
4. Marry someone about your own age, who has a similiar religion, about the same amount of education, and comes from the same economic group.
5. Keep your mate your love object.
6. Make necessary sacrifices to bring about personal adjustment to the partnership, but do not let all the compromises be on your side. the more automatic family duties and activities become, the smoother the marriage.
7. Don't inhibit a conflict. Get it into the open and straighten it out. Let steam off continuously instead of restraining it.

Liquor, Tobacco Taxes Help Make Up Gasoline Loss

CHICAGO—(U.P.)— Tax revenue has been seriously curtailed in many states by gasoline rationing, but considerable slack has been taken up by additional taxes on both liquor and tobacco, according to the Federation of Tax Administrators.

In 1942 total gasoline tax collections were $819,000,000 from all states with the exception of Arkansas, Idaho and Pennsylvania. This tax revenue was 11 per cent less than from the previous year.

The gasoline rationing program has resulted in a 34.2 per cent decrease from the 1942 gasoline taxes in all but two of the 45 states submitting their reports to the tax administrators. Data from Tennessee and Kansas showed that these states increased their gasoline tax revenues by approximately 2 per cent since March, 1941.

The opposite trend was noted in 39 states, where alcoholic taxes have made total revenue increases ranging from $166,000,000 in 1940, to $196,000,000 in 1941, and to $237,000,000 in 1942.

The Illinois liquor commission found that alcohol drinking generally increased throughout the United States during 1942, with per capita liquor consumption heaviest in Nevada. The commission found that wine is the favorite drink for Californians, while beer is the most popular drink in Michigan.

The increase in the nation's tobacco tax revenue rose from $85,000,000 in 1940 to $103,000,000 i 000,000 in 1940 to $103,000,000 in 1941, and up to $118,000,000 in 1942.

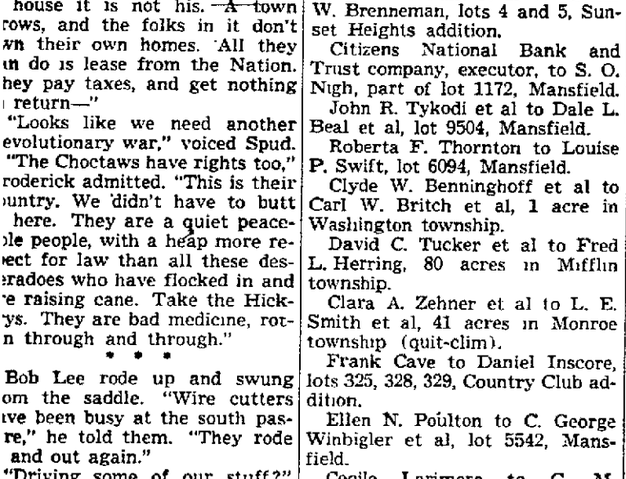
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Fall Preparation For Next Spring's Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Released by Central Press Assn.)

Nearly everyone who had a victory garden this year is beginning to plan now for an even better vegetable garden next season.

One step in proper planning for next year's Victory garden is the planting of cover crops this fall for the purpose of improving the soil.

Cover crops when turned under are beneficial to the soil in many ways. They add humus and plant food to the soil as they decay after being turned under. Soils which are lacking in humus are usually stiff and difficult to work. Such soils also dry out quickly and then bake hard.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, rye can be used as a cover crop in the Victory garden. It grows rapidly and can be sown any time up to freezing weather. Many gardeners plant rye between rows of corn or other vegetables during August and September, as illustrated. Rye can be sown fairly thickly and then lightly raked into the soil without causing any injury to the corn.

Any of the cover crops or green-manure crops should be turned under while they are still green and succulent to be of the most value.

BOOR-SIEGENTHALER VOWS TO BE SATURDAY

Detroit Girl, Daughter of Mansfield Couple, to Wed Aug. 28 In Service Here; Bride-to-Be Feted At Parties.

MISS JEAN BOOR of Detroit, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boor, 290 Vennum avenue, has chosen Friday, Aug. 28 as the date of her wedding. She will become the bride of Armin Siegenthaler, son of Mrs. Rebecca Siegenthaler. Detroit, in a service to be solemnized in Mansfield.

Miss Boor, who has many friends in Mansfield, was feted last week at a tea given by Mrs. Gilbert Eggleston, Overlook road. Ten were present for a social afternoon. When tea was served the table was attractive with garden flowers and appointments in pink and white. The guests surprised her with a shower of kitchen gifts.

Tomorrow Miss Boor will be honored at another tea to be given by Mrs. Mary Metzger, 818 Park avenue west.

The bride-to-be has been in nurses' training in Detroit for the past year. Following their marriage the couple will leave for a 10-day trip through the east. Later they will return to Detroit to make their home.

Joan Turner To Become Bride of L. A. Douglas

The engagement of Miss Joan Turner is being announced today by her father, Walter A. Turner, R. D. 1, Bellville. Miss Turner is betrothed to Lawrence A. Douglass, aviation machinist mate, second class. Mr. Douglass is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Douglass, R. D. 3.

The bride-to-be attended Springfield township high school and graduated from Mansfield Senior high. She is employed in the office of the H. L. Reed company. Miss Turner resides with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Houston, 445 Glessner avenue.

Mr. Douglass is a graduate of Springfield township high school. For the past year, he has been stationed overseas with the navy air force. He is now home on an 18-day leave.

The engaged couple have not set a definite date for their wedding.

Fete Soldier At Dinner Party

Pvt. Edwin L. Curry of Fort Lewis in Washington, who is visiting his wife and son, was honored at a dinner party at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Curry, Ollvesburg road Sunday evening.

Pvt. Curry will return to his camp after a nine-day furlough.

Our of town guests at the party included Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Cline and daughter, Phyllis, and Mrs. Betty Freed of Lima.

COLONY CLUB.

Members of the Colony club, and their families met Saturday afternoon at South park for a picnic party. After the picnic luncheon at the pavilion, games were played. Those in charge of arrangements included Mr. and Mrs. Marquis Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Moss, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Eaton and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rossborough. The next meeting scheduled for the club will take place Aug. 26. That will be a bridge party at the Westbrook Country club.

Dinner Meet Held Sunday At Van Tilburgs

Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord Van Tilburg, Ashland road, were hosts Sunday to members of the Buena Vista Community club. A covered-dish dinner was served in the evening. Guests in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Balliet and Mrs. Mary Hout.

Contests were the diversion and prizes were won by Mrs. Balliet, John Winger, Mrs. Gerald Dudley and Mrs. J. P. Reed.

Plans were made for a covered-dish dinner meeting to be held at noon Sunday, Sept. 26, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Winger, Fleming Falls road.

Thar's Danger In Them Thar Pots And Pans

Home processing of foods can be almost as hazardous as capturing a machine-gun nest, and the number of minor accidents on the home front since canning season began has spurred the Red Cross to suggest precautions.

For instance, adding water to hot paraffin is about as safe as throwing a hand grenade. There'll be a scalding explosion.

The most serious injuries, according to Red Cross reports, occur when lids are being tightened on hot fruit jars. More than one wrist has had an ugly cut when the jar shattered.

Scalding is another common kitchen accident, so have a care in pouring and don't open a pressure cooker until the pressure goes down to zero.

Above all, says the Red Cross, keep children out of the kitchen when you're canning.

Girl Would Like to Know Boss Better

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very much interested in and attracted to my employer. He is single, 39, and I am 33. He is shy and has had very little time for social contacts. He does not know how to be casual or friendly with single girls and he is always on his guard for any friendly with single girls and he is always on his guard for any friendly advances that might be made. I have avoided any contact with him during business hours, but we had to attend a business dinner together, and since then he has been complimenting me and making small but friendly advances. He even asked me to go out, but never set the day.

My friends think it would be proper to ask him over for an evening. I live with my mother. Some others advise me to hint jokingly about the proposed date, but since he is my boss, I hesitate. He once commented to a friend of his, that he found me interesting and amusing. Am I right in thinking he will break the reserve, if he's interested in me? Or must I go after him.

P. L.

"Nothing ventured, nothing gained," says the proverb. You'll have to proceed with caution lest you frighten this shy and also wary gentleman away. If some of your friends or his could manage to have both of you drop in for a pleasant informal meal, like Sunday night supper, it would help things along.

Meanwhile, continue to be "interesting and amusing," as he claims to have found you. I could mention scores of cases where the shy and reserved boss has led to the altar an employe who understood the gentle art of encouragement without showing her hand too plainly.

DEAR MISS FAIFAX:

I have a boy friend in the Army, who expects to go across in the near future and I want to send him a little gift. Can you suggest something that wouldn't be a nuisance, and something that he could use? He is very particular about his things, which makes it more difficult to me.

G.

In selecting a gift for a soldier that won't be a nuisance, the safest thing is to consult his individual taste. In New York last week, I went to a famous leather shop and saw gifts for service men that weighed only a few ounces, and were delightful in their utility and compactness. In the large city from which your letter is written there are shops specializing in such things.

There are little frames that hold about a dozen snapshots which fold and fit into a case, and weigh practically nothing. A diary is a good present if a man has a flair for writing, and may be extremely valuable after the war. A fond mother was buying a tiny clothesline with white bone clips, for drying socks, handkerchiefs, and small belongings, confiding in me her son liked to wash his own hankies.

There are of course all manner of "eats," candy, tiny jars of jams, relishes which make the Army rations more appetizing, bearing the boy friend's tastes in view, visit your leading shop and see what they have to offer for service men.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm a girl 24 years old, married to a man of 24, and we have an eleven-months old son. My husband is in the army, but before he left he struck me during an argument, and now he writes that he wants a divorce as he's in love with a girl he ran around with while I was in the hospital having our baby.

We lived with his mother for a while, but she never liked me, and she was the cause of all our fusses. I know we could get along if we had a chance to live by ourselves. I love my husband very much and don't want to give him a divorce.

At present I'm living fourteen miles out of town, working for an elderly couple, and have my baby with me. What shall I do?

B. P.

Lack of responsibility and the normal affection an adult man is supposed to have, is shown in this type of philandering. If you granted him a divorce, he'd probably pursue the same course of conduct with wife No. 2, when she was in the hospital having a baby. He's just not grown up.

Dehydrated Foods Answer Many Problems

The answer to "What shall I do with my Victory vegetables?" has been found, according to an article in the August issue of Coronet magazine. It's a dehydrator found and perfected by George Howell and Fred Carley, two Victory gardeners of Danbury, Conn.

As the answer to what to do with surplus garden vegetables, they invented a simple wood container, with nine Mazda bulbs on the bottom, and six trays to hold fruits and vegetables. It may not seem to be much of a food innovation . . . but it is, declares Coronet. For days, weeks, or months after the vegetables have been dehydrated in it, they can be put in water, and come out crisp, fresh, and as delicious as the day they were dried . . . and they'll contain the same vitamin and nutritive values, healthy and wholesome.

Now, when preserving food is so vital and yet so complicated by shortages of equipment, Danburyites have the answer to a cook's and Victory gardener's prayer, says Coronet. Anyone who can use a hammer and saw can build the unit. The frame is made with short pieces of pine or other scrap lumber found in almost any home workshop. Inside the cabinet, on the bottom, are the nine Mazda lamps, which furnish the heat. The trays complete the equipment. Dehydration is as simple as building the dehydrator.

Use your best quality fruits and vegetables. They should be just ripe enough for eating. If you dehydrate green or over-ripe vegetables or fruits, they'll lack flavor and be unattractive and will often be tough and fibrous. When it comes to prepared vegetables, except onions and garlic, it's wise to blanch or cook them in steam before drying. This reduces the number of spoilage organisms and helps preserve natural color. It also helps avoid toughening of tissues and other nutritive substances.

When you dehydrate, just remember this simple principle. Dry, warm air rises and absorbs moisture. And your job is to make the temperature and air movement within the cabinet such as to evaporate water from the surface of fruits and vegetables at about the same rate that water difuses from inside to the surface. If evaporation is faster than diffusion, the surface becomes hardened, and drying is retarded. Time for dehydration will vary . . . from eight to twelve hours or more. To store the dried food, damp-proof, dust-proof, and insect-proof containers should be used. Whatever containers are used, they should be filled so that as much air as possible is displaced. And dried food is stored in small packages, since it takes only one pound of dried vegetables or fruit to equal in nutritive value eight to ten pounds of fresh.

When you're ready to use your dehydrated food, you merely soak it in water, allowing plenty of time. Vegetables like carrots and potatoes, which are made up of large quantities of water, take little longer. Others like spinach and broccoli take less time because they're thinner and more porous and so can absorb water readily. Generally, you'll find that it will take as long to rehydrate as it took to dehydrate.

Dehydration can provide you with many a tasty, tempting meal this fall and winter which otherwise you might not have. And, concludes Coronet, there'll be fun in it, too!

School Days Are Time For Special Planning of Lunch

Youngsters aren't the only ones to start a "new year" with the beginning of the fall school term. Homemakers, too, make a fresh start in a number of ways. For instance, the transition from summer to autumn means planning heavier and bigger meals for cooler days.

During the summer months, salads frequently make a meal. When chilly, fall days roll around, however, salads become just one part of the dinner. Appetizers take the form of hot soups instead of frosty fruit cups, and desserts are richer.

But this fall, homemakers must find a way to serve hearty, nourishing meals which do not require too many ration points. Many of the foods usually associated with a heavier fare have extremely high point values. This means that every housewife must use her ingenuity to make foods go as far as possible.

To round out various courses of the meal, and to provide extra energy to meet daily maximum requirements without forfeiting precious ration points, many homemakers are serving more crackers. Statistics show that during the colder months, there is increased consumption of crackers. This year, they will assume even greater importance in the diet.

Crackers are highly concentrated energy foods. When used in combination with other foods, they not only help to extend rationed items by adding bulk, but they give new texture and flavor as well.

Since crackers are one of our most valuable foods from the point of view of calories, the wise housewife keeps them on her shelf at all times as a staple item. This fall, enlist the aid of crackers to help your family meet their energy needs. With the many varieties which are available, there is no limit to the different ways in which they may be utilized at mealtime and as snacks.

Couples Should Avoid Living With In-Laws

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

TO THE YOUNG married man or woman who is considering living with the in-laws, let me offer a warning in the following tragic story which can be matched by thousands of others bad or worse. Often the in-laws become wedges between the younger husband and wife or constantly stir up discord between them; and when children arrive they become still more pathetic victims to the oft-inevitable.

The mother who writes the following letter is but little better off than if she were a slave; nor can the father be happy either tied as he is, emotionally, to his parents. Yet this mother wonders why she can't win more willing co-operation from her children.

Under Constant Fire.

"Dear Dr. Myers:—We have three children, 10½ and 8 and a girl 4. We have been living with my husband's parents. They have been very considerate in a great many ways, and in some ways better than most parents-in-law you hear of. But there has been constant interference with our pleasure. I have not seen 18 shows in our 12 years of married life nor dare I feel free to indulge in reading. These parents themselves have never spent much time for their own pleasure. There is constant bickering about my getting to bed after their bedtime, which is often eight o'clock, when that is my free time. I am accused of prowling around after this time when I even move around on tiptoe.

"Then there has been interference in rearing our children. I tried your suggestions about getting young children to eat the right foods with so much disturbance caused by older members of the family that I had to give up. My father-in-law would not eat in order to show his displeasure and he sometimes even cried.

"My husband's folks tell him everything I do that they do not like, and he seems to think he has to jump on me about it. I cry a great deal in secret and yet I sing when I am out where the rest can see me, although I feel heartbroken.

Broke His Promise.

"I have urged my husband to get us a home by ourselves. He had promised to do this when we had children. You'll see that was about the time of the depression and I did not urge it on him. Now he becomes angry when I want to talk to him about it and says that way for days."

The story in the last quoted paragraph I have found in a great many letters. Once the young married couple move in with the in-laws, nobody moves away, as a rule, until carried quietly. Promises may have been made with good intentions but there are the heartstrings tugging tightly to the father or mother; and, alas, they so often tug more tightly there than to the other spouse.

Young people planning to marry, or just married: Decide now that at almost any financial sacrifice you won't begin living with the parents of either one of you. Your chances for happiness will be better if you will live blocks away, or still better if many miles away.

A selected lists of books on marriage and making a go if it may be had without cost by writing me enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. You advise parents to go with their child to Sunday school. My child is nearly eight and has never attended Sunday school because it is the only morning we can sleep late.

A. It is just a question as to whether your sleep is more essential to you than his spiritual growth to him. You must decide.

CRAMP STYLE

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—(INS)—War workers awakened in the wee hours of the morning by the rooster's crowing please note. There is a way to remedy the situation.

Says Ed W. Mitchell, General Electric's farm adviser: "Put the rooster on a roost so near the ceiling of the pen that it cannot raise its head. If you will observe carefully, a rooster always raises its head and stretches out the neck to crow; so just cramp his style."

Pitfalls of Love

(A sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

My father nodded, with a smile at my obvious chagrin.

"Richard is clever with that tiny camera, which he cunningly conceals. And I especially wished a photograph of you as that chambermaid. I may need it to refresh the memory of Ruth Hayes this afternoon. Did you—"

Dicky answered his question before he could finish it.

"I left the negative to be developed—a rush job—on my way over here. It will be ready in an hour."

Two Good Jobs.

"Good!" my father approved. Then he walked over to my couch where Katharine was making me pallid with powder artically rubbed into my skin, and putting lines under my eyes. "And a good job here, Katharine," he added. "Milner may well believe you have been in exactly this position all the morning."

"Remember to speak a bit faintly, as if you had been exhausted by pain," Katharine said as she steped back, and inspected me from the angle at which Milner in all probability would view me. Then she adjusted my pillows, drew a brightly covered afghan over me, and put a covered glass of water on the stand by my couch.

"There!" she said. "The stage is set. But," she added, "I think I should be the only other Thespian on it, besides Madge."

Dicky and my father caught the hint at once, and rose.

"A very sound idea," my father said. "We'll just go into the communicating suite and remain there until you call us."

I interrupted him childishly.

"Don't talk over anything that happened this morning until we can all hear it," I urged, and Dicky turned laughing eyes on me.

They'll Wait.

"Infant!" he gibed. "We'll keep mum, though, if only in exchange for a running round-by-round account of the Milner interview."

"You'll get that," Katharine promised, and then they were gone and my kinswoman looked at her wrist watch.

"Almost time," she warned. "Get ready for batle, for I imagine he'll be on time to the split second."

"You're a good prophet!" I told her softly two minutes later, when exactly on the second our knocker sounded.

"Close your mouth—and your eyes!" she whispered. "Don't open either—oh, you can peak beneath your lashes—until he's half across the room. From then on you're on your own.

She was at the door at the last word, and I obediently closed my eyes to all appearances. But from beneath my eyelids I could see the hotel manager as he stopped abruptly just inside the door and looked across at me.

Unctuous as Usual.

"I trust Mrs. Graham is not seriously indisposed," he said with his usual unctuous air.

"She is suffering, certainly," Katharine said. "These headaches of hers are cruel. They always floor her for about twenty-four hours. But she never has any serious after-effects from them. Indeed, she will be all right later today. The headache has gone, but she is exhausted from the strain.

"Is she asleep?" he asked, in the hushed tones of one approaching a bier.

"I do not think so," Katharine replied, and then raised her voice ever so slightly:

"Madge, dear,—Mr. Milner is here."

I opened my eyes languidly and looked up at him as he approached the couch. But I did not put out my hand in greeting, thanking my pretense of weakness for the excuse it gave me. I told myself that I would as soon have stroked a cobra as to have put my hand in this man's grasp.

"I am so sorry to have kept you waiting, Mr. Milner," I said faintly. "But I really am not responsible. When I have one of these headaches, Mrs. Bickett rules me with a rod of iron and her decisions are final."

"And it is a very good thing for you, I imagine," he said, and I saw that he was intensely relieved by his belief that I really had been in my own suite instead of in the Van Sittart hotel during Ruth Hayes' errand there. "Please believe me, I would not trouble you were it not a matter of necessity. Tell me, did you recommend a boy named McIntyre to me recently?"

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

BY Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

BEFORE BIDDING STARTS

Everything which precedes the bidding in rubber bridge is covered thoroughly in the new Laws of Contract Bridge, by both provisions for correct practice and the way that departures or irregularities are treated. Here are some of the main provisions:

1. During the draw for seats and partners, if a player draws more than one card, or draws one of the four cards at either end of the pack or a card from the other pack, he must draw again.

2. No player may shuffle a pack other than its dealer and the player on his left. Immediately before dealing, the dealer is entitled to the final shuffle, if he so desires.

3. When the player at the dealer's right cuts the cards, each portion must contain at least four cards.

4. The dealer should complete the cut by placing the bottom portion uppermost. The cutter should not "complete the cut."

5. Any player may, before the first card is dealt, demand a new cut or a new shuffle, if he thinks that the requirements regarding them have not been fully complied with, or if a card is faced in cutting, or if a player sees the face of a card other than the bottom card.

6. In the event of a new shuffle, only the dealer has the right to shuffle, and, thereafter, the pack should be duly cut by the player on his right.

Another provision, which is not always obeyed carefully, especially by some players making the original deal of a hand for a duplicate game, specifies the way that the cards should be dealt. The dealer must deal the 52 cards face down, one at a time in rotation into four packets, the first card to the player on his left, the last card to himself and 13 cards to each player. If he deals two cards simultaneously or consecutively to the same player—and this is the thing so often violated by duplicate players—he may, before dealing another card, rectify the error, provided he does so to the satisfaction of his opponents.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, August 24.

While there may be much confusion and agitation this day, with matters keyed to high tempo, yet it is advised that care be exercised. Some well-planned strategies are in order.

Those whose birthday it is are admonished to handle impending affairs with complete preparation and discretion, as future development depends on present wise steps. This may affect the future stability and happiness of business as well as social, domestic and affectional security. With proper attention to details, with astute and clever management, enduring good fortune should accrue. Be not carried away by excess, excitement and turbulence. Keep poised and calm.

A child born on this day may have an ardent and enterprising spirit, with much initiative and temperament. While serious and sensitive it may have a diffcult nature to curb.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

Houston Elder, new coach at Portsmouth high school, gets away on the right foot by telling the home folks what a tough schedule has been lined up for the Trojans this autumn, a schedule that includes Mansfield.

Now if the Trojans don't do any better than they did a year ago under Peg Elsesser, the new mentor can ejaculate: "Boy, look at the tough teams we played!"

It's a neat way of easing himself off the spot before the spot gets warm. He'll have no boasts to live up to.

Speaking before the Trojan Boosters club, Elder said:

"Football is a business with me. The Trojans are your football team and I'll do the best I can with what I have to work with. The idea is to get it across to the kids that we will get in there, train and fight, and we'll have a good football team. The hardest thing I have to do is keep up the morale of the players, give them faith in themselves.

We have ahead of us the toughest football schedule played in years," Elder continued. "We meet the cream of West Virginia when we play Charleston and Huntington. Ashland is the champion team of Kentucky, and Mansfield is on a par with Massillon."

* * *

Well, now, those are kind words Mr Elder speaks about Mansfield, and I think maybe he is right this year, but not last year and not some other years.

And I don't blame him a bit for cushioning the fall beforehand, just in case.

After all, Portsmouth wasn't terrific last year, and the Trojans have only one regular coming back, and two reserves.

Elder complimented the Booster club on a worthwhile organization and mentioned the fact that such clubs are banned in his home state of Kentucky.

He ventured the opinion that the Boosters do fine work in backing high school athletics, and declared that the fact that the club exists gives encouragement to the players

And I venture the opinion that Mr. Elder was right again, and it's too bad that the Mansfield organization was permitted to die a year ago

* * *

Oh, yes. The Booster club president told Elder it would be all right if he won half his games this year.

Ex-Ashlander Calls African Conference.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Despite lack of cheering co-eds, soldiers in North Africa are planning for a football season, the war department reported today.

A full complement of football equipment has been shipped on request of Capt. Harry G. Gamage of Bowling Green, Ky. Capt. Gamage, who was formerly head football coach at the University of Kentucky, is now athletic director of the special service division in North Africa.

Maj. Raymond J. Novotny of Cleveland, O., former Ashland college athlete, was in charge of arrangements for a two-day conference of special service officers for the American Fifth army, at which a broadened sports and educational program, guided by the special services division, was discussed.

Vets Tested In Comeback Drives

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Two former welterweight champions, Henry Armstrong and Fritzie Zivic, face severe tests in their comeback campaigns in feature events of this week's national boxing program.

Zivic, Pittsburgh veteran, meets Lightweight Champion Bob Montgomery of Philadelphia, in a 10-round non title fight at Shibe Park in Philadelphia tonight. The contest will be the 33rd of Zivic's comeback campaign.

Friday night, in New York's Madison Square Garden, Armstrong, the former wearer of three crowns, meets Cpl. Ray (Sugar) Robinson, number one welterweight challenger, in his 27th comeback appearance.

Homers Ring In Majors

23 Circuit Blows Are Hammered Out Sunday.

By TED MEIER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

SUNDAY was home run day in the major leagues.

A total of 23 roundtrippers, including two with the bases loaded, were clouted to boost the home run production for the year to 678—340 in the American and 338 in the National League.

* * *

Twelve of the 23 circuit blows were made in the American loop and six of the 12 were hammered at Detroit where baseball's largest crowd of the year—58,404—chortled as the Tigers walloped the first place New York Yankees twice, 12-0 and 8-3.

* * *

The Yanks committed the hard to believe total of 10 errors in the two games, seven in the opener But misplays had nothing to do with the final outcome since the Tigers backed up effective pitching by Dizzy Trout and Tommy Bridges with a 27-hit attack that included six doubles and four homers.

One of Detroit's homers was Rudy York's 26th of the year and his 13th of the month.

A grand slam homer by Catcher Walker Cooper sparked the St. Louis Cardinals to a double win over the Boston Braves, 6-1 and 5-1.

Cooper's feat came in the ninth inning of the opener and helped Rookie Al Brazle to his fourth straight victory.

Vince DiMaggio of Pittsburgh also socked a grand slam homer at Brooklyn, but it availed nothing since the Dodgers took both ends of a twin bill from the Pirates, 6-1 and 8-6.

Tony Cuccinello socked a ninth inning homer that sent the Philadelphia Athletics down to their 17th straight defeat, only three short of the American League record The four-base poke gave the Chicago White Sox a 3-2 victory in the afterpiece of a twin bill after Edgar Smith won the opener, 5-2.

Cincinnati tightened its hold on second place in the National League by beating the Phillies twice, 4-3 and 20-6. Elmer Riddle won his 16th game in the opener.

With their manager, Mel Ott, home in bed from an attack of the flu, the New York Giants took it on the chin twice from the Chicago Cubs, 6-2 and 4-3.

Cleveland beat the Boston Red Sox twice, 6-0 and 7-6 in 13 innings. Jack Salveson twirled a masterful two-hit shutout in the opener. Oris Hockett won the second game by singling with the bases full in the 13th.

The St. Louis Browns won their sixth in a row by beating Washington 8-5 in the first game of a doubleheader The Senators ended the streak by winning the nightcap 4-2 in 10 innings.

It'll Be Slinging Sammy Against College Aces in All-Star Game

Bob Steuber

Pat Harder

Sammy Baugh

Steve Bagarus

Otto Graham

Annual All-Star football game between the professional champs and the collegiate All-Americans is on tap at Evanston, Ill., Wednesday, Aug. 25, with the Washington Redskins meeting the All-Stars, coached by Harry Stuhldreher. The game appears to have all the earmarks of a passing battle between Slinging Sammy Baugh of the Redskins and a flock of All-Star backs, including Otto Graham, ex-Northwestern ace; Bob Steuber, All-Big Six back at Missouri, and Pat Harder, All-Big Ten fullback from Wisconsin. Steve Bagarus, former Notre Dame back who starred in the recent East-West game on the coast, will be one of the Redskins the All-Stars will have to watch. Dutch Bergman is the Redskin coach.

Lymper Wants Spring Drill

Hops Into Fight on Grid Practice Ban.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—It looks as if the proposed abandonment of spring football practice for Ohio high schools—to be voted on Sept. 7 by the scholastic principals—might run into a bit of opposition.

At the spring clinic session of the Ohio school football coaches' association, the mentors rolled up a three-to-one vote in favor of outlawing spring workouts for the duration and then recommended the state high school athletic association put the matter up to the final authorities, the principals.

Charles (Chuck) McLain, Bridgeport high school coach, says the resolution was railroaded through the meeting of coaches, but Coach Jim Robinson of Canton Lehman, its sponsor and former prexy of the association, denied this.

Two more of the state's top-flight mentors hopped into the scrap today, each favoring continuance of the spring sessions—and each asking that coaches urge their principals to vote that way in the Sept. 7 balloting.

The newcomers are Jim Lymper of Galion, and Elwood Kammer of Massillon's mighty Tigers. Each stressed the value of spring workouts as conditioners for youngsters who may get into the war before the football season starts; the need for the added training due to the squads being made up of new boys; the inability to start early in the fall because so many squad members will hang on to defense jobs until the last possible minute; and the civic interest aroused by the early sessions.

Paul Jenkins, who formerly coached those Powerhouses at Portsmouth, is now boss of the footballers at Louisville, Ky, male high school, and he's looking for an Oct. 1 game at Louisville against an Ohio opponent. That's a lengthy trip, in these days of three-gallon gasoline stamps, but interested coaches may contact Jenkins at 2803 Grinstead drive, Louisville.

All Stars Too Optimistic

Stuhldreher Warns of Over-Confidence.

EVANSTON, Ill.—(AP)—The all star gridders are much too optimistic about their clash with the Washington Redskins Wednesday night to suit Harry Stuhldreher.

So the Wisconsin football coach, head of the staff directing the collegians this year, called his athletes together yesterday. It was to have been their day off—the first after 15 days of double drills—but Stuhldreher wanted to speak his mind and he did, concluding with:

"So there has been entirely too much optimistic conversation. You fellows are thinking of the score of a victory you have not earned."

* * *

He pointed out that Washington, which takes credit for being the first national football league team to concentrate on star linemen instead of backs in the annual draft of graduating collegians, would have a line outweighing any combination the all stars could put on the field Then he added:

"And you now know that Sammy Baugh has miraculously recovered from a sprained back."

The scheduled day off followed Saturday night's final scrimmage in which the so called varsity ripped off five touchdowns—one on the first play.

Millers Get 12 Runs In 1 Frame

(By Associated Press)

It was a day of big innings for the American Association's second division clubs yesterday.

Minneapolis exploded a 12-run inning, tops for the 1943 season; Kansas City blasted away for eight, and Toledo got a cluster of six.

Milwaukee's league leading Brewers finally overcame the Mudhen lead with 21 hits strung over 10 innings to win 8-7. Toledo moved into fourth place ahead of Louisville by winning the second game 7-1.

A homer by Bobby Dill with the bases loaded and another by Jimmy Pofahl with two on featured the Minneapolis 12-run inning that brought a 17-5 victory over Indianapolis. The Hoosiers won the opener 6-5.

At Kansas City, the Blues lost to Columbus 5-3 but their eight run second inning gave them the second game easily 11-1.

St. Paul walked off with the only sweep of the day by defeating Louisville, 2-1 and 5-0.

No games were scheduled for today.

J.; Ed Day, Taft, Tex. and Jack Tuero, New Orleans.

Turn Heat On Giant Bosses

Front Office Blamed For Last Place Club.

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Baseball fans and writers are putting the "heat" on the Giants' front office these days, blaming Prexy Horace Stoneham and his advisors for continuing to trot out daily the "old men of Manhattan"—a pitiful aggregation, indeed, to represent the world's largest city.

The current Giants, often described as the worst Polo Grounds outfit since John McGrew came to the club in the spring of 1902, are in the National league cellar, 33½ games behind the leading Cardinals, and 10½ games behind the seventh-place Phillies.

Yesterday, for example, 17,711 fans left the Polo Grounds in glum despair after watching the Giants drop both ends of a doubleheader to the Cubs. The dismal afternoon was punctuated properly by that "great pinch-hitter," Ray Berres, in the ninth inning of the nightcap.

A Giant rally had put the tying and winning runs on base, with two out. Then the New Yorkers, through lack of proper reserves, had to call on little Berres, a .154 batsman, to pinch hit. He rolled out; and the Cubs won, 4 to 3. Player-Manager Mel Ott fortunately was home with the flu.

Until recently, metropolitan fans and writers had two targets to shoot at: The Giants and the then floundering Dodgers. But shrewd Branch Rickey of the Dodgers evaporated Brooklyn criticism by bringing in so many new, young players that game-time at Ebbets field now is known as "the children's hour." Rickey's maneuver left the Giants as a lone target for the critics. And what a target!

Running the bases, the Giants look like old men on snowshoes in the winter of their careers. The pitching is of minor league calibre. And when the Stone h-a-m-s, seventh in batting in the league, do get men on base, they forgetfully leave them there. Ott, who no longer would be trying to manage the club from right field if he had anyone else capable to send in, has slumped at bat to less than .240.

Ott actually was booed by the fans on Aug: 15 when he went hitless through both games of a doubleheader. However, most fans and writers sympathize with Mel. They know he did an excellent job last year, his first season at the helm, when he guided a laggard team to third place. They know that the squad, given him this season by the front office, is a poor reward for his long years of grand play with the club.

The fire of criticism is directed at the Giants' front office; and justly so. Because Stoneham and associates failed to rehabilitate the club during the off-season—or later, to make up for losses to the services.

HULSE SETS TWO TRACK MEET RECORDS

BUFFALO, N. Y.— (U.P.) —Bill Hulse, America's fastest miler, today holds two Niagara frontier AAU records.

Hulse cracked two meet records in winning the 600 and 660-yard runs in the Buffalo uniformed fireman's track meet yesterday. He ran the 600 in 1:11.6 and the 660 in 120.4 nosing out Pvt. Joe Nowicki, former Fordham star, both times. The previous district marks for the events were 114.6 and 121.8.

Tribe Scores Double Victory Over Bosox

Salveson Hurls Two Hitter In Opener; Second Goes 13 Frames.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — A four-day program of doubleheaders between the Cleveland Indians and the Boston Red Sox got under way in true marathon style yesterday, with the teams playing a total of 22 innings in Municipal stadium. The Tribe won both games, 6-0 and 7-6.

The two clubs move to League park for a twin bill today, and back to the lakefront garden for a twi-night affray Wednesday. Another matinee bargain at League Park Thursday ends the series.

Jack Salveson won the first game yesterday with two-hit pitching, supported by a 14-hit barrage by Tribesmen.

Mike Naymick seemed on the road to an even better performance in the afterpiece, when he held the Easterners hitless until two were out in the sixth inning. His control went to the winds in the seventh, however, and he was replaced by Joe Heving.

The Indians headed into the eighth with a 6-2 margin, but the Red Sox knotted the count with a five-run uprising.

Leon Culberson started the attack with a double, Tony Lupien and Bobby Doerr singled, and Pete Fox slashed a triple that sent Heving to the showers. Vernon Kennedy came to work, but before he could end the inning Jim Tador doubled and Manager Joe Cronin pinch singled, tying the score.

Kennedy and Joe Dobson then pitched effective ball until the 13th, when Gene Desautels walked and went to third on Kennedy's single. Allie Reynolds went in to run for Desautels, and scored on a long single by Orls Hockett.

* * *

In the opener, the Indians scored twice in the second on hits by Buddy Rosar, Mickey Rocco, Lou Boudreau and Russ Peters. They added another in the fifth when Jeff Heath tripled and tallied on Rosar's single, and two more in the seventh on a single by Salveson, a triple by Peters and a double by Hockett. The final marker came in the eighth on singles by Rosar and Boudreau and an error.

Byrd Takes Open Crown

Ex-Baseball Star Reaches Golf Heights.

CHICAGO — (U.P.) — An athletic dividend on a decision made seven years ago came to stocky Sammy Byrd of Philadelphia today.

Byrd climaxed a long fight for golfing stardom yesterday when he won the Victory national open tournament with a 72-hole aggregate of 277 strokes. The Victory was the former major league baseball star's first "big time" links triumph and netted him $1,000.

More important than the money involved was the fact that the Victory justified Byrd's confidence in himself — confidence he expressed when he turned his back on a major league baseball contract and switched to professional golf.

* * *

Byrd made his decision in the spring of 1937. After serving six years with the New York Yankees and two seasons with the Cincinnati Reds he was a free agent.

His decision was given a stern test for soon there came to Sam a contract offer from Branch Rickey, then general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

"Maybe the chance to stick in baseball was tempting," Sam said after his brilliant triumph yesterday, "but I never wavered on my idea of taking up pro golf. I knew that if I was going to change I had to do it before I became any older. In fact now, I often wish I had quit baseball a couple seasons earlier."

Byrd had rounds of 68-67-72-70 for his winning aggregate. His total was five strokes better than that of his nearest foe, Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., the 1941 national open titlist.

While Byrd played consistently good golf, his winning edge was due principally to brilliant putting. The 33-year-old Philadelphian was torrid throughout the four rounds on the carpets.

The oddity of his putting streak was that he was using a putter acquired only 10 days ago during the Ryder cup matches at Detroit. He got the putter from Jimmy DeMaret and hadn't even practiced with it before the tournament here.

* * *

Wood with his 282 total had a one strike edge over a pair of soldier stars, Sgt. Jim Turnesa of Staten Island, N. Y., and Melvin (Chick) Harbert of Camp Grant, Ill., who tied for third place.

Byron Nelson of Toledo, O., was fifth with 284 and tied for sixth place were Ky Laffoon of Tulsa, Okla., and DeMaret.

Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles was next in the widely separated field with 290 and rounding out the leader list was Jim Ferrier of Chicago with 291 John Lehman of Chicago was the low amateur with 294.

Segura Captures Southhampton Title

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I.—(U.P.)—Francisco (Pancho) Segura, Ecuador, pointed today to the National championships next week at Forest Hills, having captured the 53rd annual Southampton Invitational tourney.

In the finals played at the Meadow club here yesterday, Segura defeated Sidney Wood, former Davis cup star of New York, in straight sets, 6-3, 7-5, 9-7, adding the title to his conquests of the National Intercollegiate, Eastern Grass, Eastern Intercollegiate and the New Jersey tournaments this year.

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds rested their weary legs today following a baserunning exhibition in the nightcap of Sunday's doubleheader.

The Reds squeaked through the first game, winning 4-3 by dint of brilliant relief pitching by Clyde Shoun and three fast double plays by Cincinnati's crackerjack infield.

The second contest turned out to be a debacle and when the six Philly pitchers ceased tossing and ducking, the scoreboard was 20-6, in favor of the Reds.

Twenty-two hits, good for a total of 37 bases were racked up by Deacon McKechnie's athletes. During the two hours and 18 minutes, the Reds hit six doubles, three triples and a homer. Bert Haas accounted for three of the doubles and Eric Tipton authored the homerun.

The Reds opened up on Rookie Ray Conger in the second inning and by the time the Phillies made three putouts, six runs had crossed the plate. They added single runs in the third and fourth and then smashed out seven counters in the fifth. Five more runs in the seventh finished the Reds' scoring for the day.

Ray Starr, who worked 14 innings the last time he went against the Phils, gave way to Joe Beggs when the Phils rose up in the fourth inning and scored four runs. Beggs was credited with the victory.

The Reds play their final game in the east this season Tuesday night against the Phils.

JRGES FDR TO SET UP SINGLE U. S. AIR FORCE

ien. M'Carran Declares War Could Be Won 'Twice as Fast' By Planes.

By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Sen. Pat McCarran (D.) Nev., today petitioned President Roosevelt by letter for establishment of a unified, separate air force to rush Axis power.

"Food may write the peace but air power will win the war," said McCarran.

McCarran, who has been a leader in civil aeronautics legislation, offered to aid the president if legislation is needed to raise air power to a new position of importance in the war effort.

He asked the president to take action now "which will give us the unified, co-ordinated, autonomous air force that makes most effective use of the air power with which we must win the war."

"Take action along the lines recommended by the ablest of our advisors, or by a majority of them; take action to the limit of the power which your legal advisors tell you that you possess; take such action as you can, and if you deem it not enough, ask the congress to take further action; but take action now,' McCarran said in his letter.

"Every hour spent winning this war the slow way, when we could be winning it twice as fast, is half an hour of defeat."

McCarran said that achievement of American air forces have been so great "that I know it must have been hard for you to continue to deny those forces the autonomy which they seek, and the recognition which they so richly deserve.

"But you have been hampered by lack of unanimity among your advisors, both as to the end to be achieved and the force to be pursued, and serious questions have been raised how far you as chief executive might go in giving this nation an independent and autonomist air force."

McCarran said he believed that the best minds" in civil and military aviation as well as a majority of the people, want air forces made independent for the army and navy.

NEW CIG DRIVE

Gas Station Workers To Raise Army Cigaret Fund.

Employes of Standard Oil Stations in Mansfield joined those throughout Ohio today in a campaign expected to provide cigarets—nearly 70 miles of them—to men in the armed forces overseas.

Company officials have agreed to match employes' contributions. The combined goal, of Mansfield and the state, is at least 1,600,000 cigarets.

Local committees in Mansfield and other principal cities have been named to carry the campaign to every one of the company's more than 5,000 employes.

Arrangements have been made with cigaret manufacturers by which the smokes are purchased at a special price. Each package will bear a gift sticker and there will be a card in each carton.

"The Mansfield division," said J. B. Coleman, manager, "is organized to do its share in sending cigarets to the men in the jungles of Pacific Islands, to North Africa, Sicily, to naval ships, to Iceland and a score of other places."

Glytone Steps To Victory Again In Cleveland Show

Returning victoriously to Glenleigh Farms today from Cleveland's Victory horse show Paul Keay, trainer and manager, advised S. Glen Vinson, owner: 'You're going to have to shoot Glytone or build a larger trophy room.'"

The Glenleigh champion passed a field of 12 Saturday night to win the championship trophy in the Tennessee walking horse stake after being tied the blue in Friday night's open class.

Glenleigh uncovered a coming champion in Last Chance's Midnight, shown by Fred Norris, when the three-year-old colt was tied third Friday night and came within a step or two of defeating Glytone Saturday night. The horses will rest until Canton's Labor day show and close with the Mt. Gilead army benefit show on Sept. 12.

FILE PRIMARY ELECTION COST

Crawford County Candidates List Campaign Expenses.

BUCYRUS — Expense accounts filed by primary candidates were few, with only five Bucyrus candidates listing expenses along with three from Galion and two from Crestline, turned in to the office of the board of elections, before the Saturday deadline.

Only Bucyrus mayoralty candidates listed expenditures with the successful candidate, R. L. Hertzer topping the list with $144.95. Others listed expenses as follows: Carl Light, $67.66; Oliver K. Bender, $100.25; W. F. Whiteamire, $93.79 and Clyde M. Wilson, Republican candidate, $28.10.

In Galion Francis M. Shumaker listed $19; Ralph Mains, $4.12; Fred Sautter, $11.18 and Crestline candidates Albert P. Sonner reported $10 spent and Frank E. Zeigler, $6.25.

Rev. C. D. Loehr, pastor of First Presbyterian church thought that filling the pulpit each Sunday was insufficient gesture along the line of the war time accelerated production program so he applied at a local manufacturing plant for a job.

Saturday he completed his fourth week in the power shop at the W. A. Riddell manufacturing plant, now turning out work for the maritime commission, operating machines and doing all types of labor required in the shop.

Not only is the pastor taking his place in labor but his wife, at the insistence of the Bucyrus ministerial association last week accepted the job of teaching religious education in the Bucyrus public schools, a position left vacant by the resignation of Mrs. A. J. E. Manton who moved from the city.

Sign Waivers After Arrest on Speeding Charges.

Four motorists signed waivers and posted bonds in Mansfield municipal court on charges of speeding over the week-end and another motorist was fined $10 and costs in that court for the same violation, state patrolmen and city police reported today.

Arrested Sunday on Central avenue, Emil J. Palmer was fined $10 and costs this morning.

The four motorists who signed waivers, all of them arrested on U. S. Route 42, are Everett W. Pace, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Robert W. James, Buffalo, N. Y.; Clyde O. Mumcey, Akron; Earl G. Morris, Cincinnati.

Student Nurses Eligible To Join U. S. Cadet Corps

Student nurses in the Mansfield area are eligible to apply immediately for membership in the newly-created U. S. Cadet Nurses corps, Miss Faye Chamberlain, representing the civilian defense medical council in Mansfield, said today.

Young women taking nurses' training will be permitted to complete their course with all expenses paid in the school they are attending now if the school is receiving federal funds under the Bolton nurse training act, Miss Chamberlain said.

The Cadet Nurses program, designed to provide a larger supply of nurses for duty at home, is open to women from 18 to 35 who have a high school education.

Women who enlist now in the Cadet Nurses corps will have their expenses paid retroactive to July 1. They will receive credit for study already completed and will complete their education earlier, it was pointed out. Students in training 90 days before the end of the war will finish their training at government expense.

LANDS BLAZING BOMB-LADEN PLANE IN SURF, ESCAPES BLAST

(By United Press)

LONDON—From a hospital bed where he is being treated for minor burns, 2nd Lieut. Mathew L. Vinson, 24, of Houston, Tex., co-pilot of the flying fortress "Black Heart," related today how he single-handedly crash-landed his blazing bomb-laden plane in the surf off the English coast and escaped only a few seconds before a blast sent it sky-high.

The episode began at 3,000 feet, when exploding oxygen bottles sent flames through the ship and the rest of the crew, including navigator 2nd Lieut. Charles C. Noderer of Windsor. Ohio, bailed out.

Finally only a bombardier and Lieut. Vinson were left and Vinson discovered that his parachute had been blown through a hole in the plane by the blast, leaving him stranded in the flying torch.

The other officer, 2nd Lieut. John H. Miller of Quick, Neb., motioned to Vinson that he wanted to stay with him and then indicated that they both leap out together, with Vinson hanging on to Miller's chute. But they couldn't get through the hatch together.

"Finally I dragged him (Miller) to the hatch and shoved him through," Vinson said.

"I got the damned thing down somehow and jumped out of a window and ran through the shallow water as fast as I could.

"I didn't get very far before I fell. Some civilians came and got me away from the burning plane. I warned them about the bomb load and everyone kept back.

"In a few minutes the whole thing exploded, sending smoke and columns of flame up several hundred feet."

DENIES CHARGE

Taxi Driver's Hearing Aug. 31 In 50-Cent 'Embezzlement.'

Charged by R. N. VanDyne, proprietor of the DeLuxe Cab company, with embezzling 50 cents, Donald E. Stevens, 219 South Mulberry street, pleaded innocent this morning in municipaly court and his hearing was set for Aug. 31.

Judge H. H. Schettler continued Stevens' bond at $200 which was provided Saturday for his release.

The municipal courtroom was jammed this morning for the arraignment. Atty. George W. Biddle, counsel for Stevens, and City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner requested continuance of the case to enable them to obtain witnesses.

Stevens, whose wife is an expectant mother, was arrested Saturday by city detectives on VanDyne's warrant. Stevens has been a driver for VanDyne's firm.

Boy Arrested As He Attempts To Withdraw Funds

Arrested when he tried to withdraw money for a second time from his grandfather's savings account at the Citizens Savings and Loan, a 16-year-old Mansfield boy came before Juvenile Judge S. H. Cramer today.

The boy had stolen the savings book and on Aug. 9 withdrew $138 which he spent. On making this discovery, the grandfather notified the bank that the boy should not be given any more money. When he again attempted to withdraw $75 last Wednesday he was apprehended.

When the grandfather refused to file charges, the boy was placed on probation for a year by Judge Cramer and was ordered to report to the court every week for 90 days.

Another 16 - year - old youth charged with forgery will have a hearing in juvenile court in the near future. The boy was arrested when he forged a check for $5 drawn on the Mansfield Savings and Trust National bank and cashed at the Donley restaurant.

HEAR BOY ORATOR

Townsend Members To Attend Program Wednesday.

Tiffin Reed, a boy orator and the national Townsend representative from Missouri, will speak Wednesday night at a Townsend meeting at Radio City hall, Archie May, president of the Mansfield club, said today.

A covered dish dinner will precede the meeting which is scheduled to get under way at 7:30 p. m. May said a program will be presented and the meeting will be open to the public.

TEACHERS HIRED

MILLERSBURG—At a special meeting of the Glenmont board of education two teachers were hired to fill existing vacancies. James J. Murphy of Rogers, was hired to teach social science and history. He is a graduate of Ohio university. Miss Charlotte Morey was hired as music and English instructor at Glenmont. She is a graduate of Mt. Union college and comes from Alliance.

ATTEND SHOOT

BUCYRUS—Seven Bucyrus trap shooters will leave Tuesday or early Wednesday for Vandalia for the 44th annual Grand American trap shooting classic, which will continue through Friday.

In the Bucyrus group will be W. A. Smith, W. Kranich, J. Herschler, E. E. Smith, E. C. Cole, L. E. Spiece and F. W. Croneis.

SOCIAL PLANNED

The 4-H clubs of the Adario community decided at a recent meeting to hold their annual ice cream social next Thursday evening at the Town Hall. Proceeds of the festival will be used to pay the club's 4-H camp expenses.

ICKES RETURNS COAL MINES TO 53 COMPANIES

Lewis on Spot With Threat UMW Will Work Only For Government.

WASHINGTON — Certain coal mines having contracts with John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers were restored to private ownership by Interior Secretary Ickes today despite Lewis' statement in June that his men would work until Oct. 31 only if the government kept control of the property.

Ickes, as coal administrator, announced termination of government possession and control of the mines of 53 companies, and a spokesman said "some" of them were operated under contracts with the UMW. Asked about Lewis' threat, he said "we'll just have to see what happens."

Lewis, in ending the third general strike by the UMW in June, said that his miners were to work until Oct. 31 only if the government retained control of the mines throughout that period.

The mines were returned in accordance with the Smith-Connally anti-strike act requirement that property seized by the government be returned within 60 days after restoration of "productive efficiency."

Although citing this provision of the act, Ickes did not reveal his interpretation of the provision or say whether Attorney General Biddle has given him the ruling he had asked on what the act requires him to do about restoring the mines.

Approximately 3,700 mines continue under government control. Ickes has been "surveying" the productive efficiency" of these mines "preliminary to determining the applicability of the provisions of the Smith-Connally act pertaining to the release of the property."

The companies whose properties were released included:

Island Creek Coal company, Huntington, W. Va.; Marianna Smokeless Coal company, Huntington; Pond Creek Pocahontas company, Huntington; Red Jacket Coal corporation, Columbus, O.; Hanna Coal company, Cleveland; Jefferson Coal company, Cleveland; Hatfield-Campbell Creek Coal company, Cincinnati; Rail and River Coal company, Cleveland; the Logan Clay Products company, Logan, O.; The Lorado Coal Mining company, Columbus, O.; Hook Coal company, Coshocton, O.

FUNERAL TUESDAY

Services will be conducted at the Wappner funeral home Tuesday at 2 p. m. for Charles G. Patton, seven-week-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Patton, who died Sunday at the parents' home at the rear of 207 Harker street, after a brief illness. Burial will be in the Mansfield cemetery. The parents are the sole survivors.

If you ever need $25, $50, $100 or more quickly and simply, come to Household Finance. If you have a job so that you can repay in small monthly payments, you are welcome to apply for any amount up to $1000. The sooner you repay the less your loan costs. Example: A $50 loan repaid in 6 monthly instalments of $9.24 each costs $5.44—if repaid in one month the cost is only $1.50. No endorsers or guarantors are ever needed. We never make inquiries of friends or relatives.

GENERAL DROP RECORDED ON STOCK MARKET

Fractional Declines Found Widespread Over List In Early Trading.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Fractional declines were widespread in today's first stock market session of the week.

On the offside at a quiet opening were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas Aircraft, Chesapeake & Ohio, Southern Pacific, U. S. Rubber, Western Union, J. I. Case, Paramount Pictures and American Smelting.

Trend analysts found scant comfort in the railway equipment outlook as indicated by the summary of the Association of American Railroads disclosing class 1 systems as of Aug. 1 had 27,795 new freight cars on order compared with 36,453 on the same date last year.

BECOMES ELDER

Butler Pastor Named During Evangelical Parley.

BUTLER—Rev. R. W. Faulkner, pastor of Mt. Sinai Evangelical church here, was ordained an elder of the Ohio Conference of Evangelical churches at the 106th annual conclave of the conference in Cleveland, it was announced today.

Officers elected at the conclave included Rev. Leroy Deminger, Akron, education director, and Rev. C. W. Ruhlman, Canton, treasurer.

THEATERS

Hope's Jealous.

During filming of "Dixie," now showing at the Ohio, Bing Crosby had a constant visitor. The visitor was Bob Hope, Bing's pal. When the cameras weren't grinding, Hope let loose with a flock of gags and Crosby was the victim of all of them. Bob couldn't resist one crack. When the director brought in a horse, long past the running stage, for a scene in the film, Hope quipped, "Nice of Bing to let them use one of his horses in the picture." But Crosby says Hope is jealous because he's not in "Dixie."

Bombardier.

"Bombardier" now playing at the Madison, tells the story of America's most potent air weapon, the Norden bomb sight, and how this nation came to adopt it. The film stars Pat O'Brien and Randolph Scott. These two are seen as friendly rivals. O'Brien being a great advocate of high altitude bombing while Scott thinks dive bombing is the only thing. O'Brien establishes a bombardier school for young fliers and his first assistant is Scott. The film reaches its climax with the student fliers raiding a Jap held island shortly after Pearl Harbor. Madison co-attraction is "Good Lucky Mr. Yates."

Comedy Film.

"The McGuerins From Brooklyn," current attraction at the Park stars William Bendix, Grace Bradley and Arline Judge. The story tells the adventure of two Brooklyn cab drivers who have made a fortune and are now riding the crest of fame. Former Heavyweight Champion Max Baer plays a leading role. Park companion feature is "Hangmen Also Die."

Colman-Garson.

Ronald Colman and Greer Garson are currently starred in the Ritz's top film "Random Harvest," the film version of James Hilton's novel of the same name. It is the love story of a man who forgets his past, through war injury, that brings amnesia and a woman whose love and steadfast faith guide and inspire him. Co-feature is "Bordertown Gun Fighters."

WEEK LEFT TO CHANGE BOOKS

Motorists Told Gas Coupons Must Be Exchanged Before Tuesday, Aug. 31.

fied on the front with the words "permits delivery of one unit of gasoline," but the new type carries only the words "mileage ration" plus a large letter "B" or "C."

An appeal for volunteers to assist in the issuance of a great number of supplemental rations and the exchange of books was made today in this OPA district. Officials at the local ration board said that they could use 10 to 15 volunteers to help with the issuance of the gasoline books.

In renewing supplemental applications, rationing boards will automatically restore the mileage lost in reducing coupon values from four to three gallons for motorists who still qualify for the same mileage, and who demonstrate by the information in their renewal application that they cannot get along on the decreased ration.

Motorists whose supplemental gasoline rations expire after Aug. 31 can apply for a restoration of the cut anytime within 30 days before their supply of coupons will be exhausted. In cases of renewals, boards have been instructed to be critical and thorough in order to protect the gasoline savings resulting from the cut.

The tire inspection record must be included with both the renewal application or the exchange of coupons. Renewal application forms are available at some gasoline stations, at plant transportation advisory committees and rationing boards.

Bishop also reminded motorists that all gasoline coupons in their possession must be endorsed upon receipt from the local boards with license number and the state of registration on the front of the coupons.

MEETS WEDNESDAY

The Snip and Stitch It 4-H club of Madison township will meet Wednesday at the home of Jean McCarrick, 202 Vennum avenue. Members of the club met recently with Elnora Tinkey, 488 South Diamond street. Because the time for judging projects is near, the club devoted most of its time to sewing garments.

Hex, Child of Horror, Makes Debut to World

Two more fitting names could not be found than those of this black panther mother and cub in the San Francisco zoo. Hex, daughter of Horror, made her public debut, left, appropriately enough on Friday the thirteenth and celebrated by scratching her keeper. Mother and daughter are pictured together, right. Black panthers are said to be the most vicious of all cats.

DANES SWELLING SABOTAGE TOLL

Blow Up Factories and Wreck Trains Despite Appeal of King Christian.

(By Associated Press)

STOCKHOLM—The newspaper Svenska Dagbladet said today two factories had been blown up over the week-end despite a joint appeal from King Christian X and the government for a cessation of attacks on German war activities.

The newspaper said an aluminum factory at Frederiksberg had been wrecked and a Copenhagen camouflage factory blasted. A German patrol boat was reported split by an explosion at Knittelsborner near Copenhagen.

Sabotage also continued against railways transporting troops and supplies to Danish ports for movement to Norway, the Stockholm Tidningen reported.

Despite a new Quisling decree making death the penalty for sabotage in Norway, freight cars containing food were wrecked at Bergen, the Tidningen said.

A report from Norway said many persons bombed out of their homes in Germany were being moved to Norway where the Nazis were taking over hotels and resort centers.

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON — No man is closer to Winston Churchill than Brendan Bracken, his minister of information, who has just arrived in Quebec.

That circumstance gives special weight to everything Bracken says in England, where his crooning is as authoritative in its way as Frank Sinatra's here. His presence at Quebec is good evidence that something besides military business is up.

When the newspaper men at Quebec had nothing to write about, and the lid on the Roosevelt-Churchill conference was tighter than ever, and they had exhausted every line of plausible speculation, Bracken called a press conference to tell them there was no news and in the process gave them a story good for Page One in anybody's newspaper about how when Germany was licked, Britain would throw every ounce of her strength against Japan.

Clapper

Of course it was no casual remark at all. Bracken was not just filling up a dull day for the reporters. He seized a clear day to try to rub a deep suspicion out of the American mind—the suspicion that Britain intends to allow America to carry the load in the war against Japan. That suspicion worries the British a good deal. They have heard it voiced by numbers of Americans who have been in England this summer.

The British want nothing to fester our close relations hence their effort to reassure the people of America on this point. The suspicion got its foothold from the remarks about partial demobilization that Churchill made in his radio talk last March. Bracken is reflecting Churchill when he says the British are going into the Pacific war with their navy and air force all out. They have large interests there that they must recover.

Before it is over, Americans probably will be complaining that the British are trying to hog the Pacific war.

Well, it's that kind of thing that Bracken is trying to deal with. He will try to determine the wind direction in the presidential campaign. Numerous American publishers and editors have seen Bracken this summer and he has told them that while Britain will never forget the debt of gratitude which she owes to President Roosevelt for coming to her assistance in her death struggle in 1940, the British people want to work with the American people whoever may be the designated spokesmen of the two countries. His chief fear is that some overzealous Britisher will try to take sides in the American presidential campaign.

Bracken is not a British Elmer Davis. Our chief of propaganda labors under difficulties that even Bracken could hardly survive. Davis never knows when he is going to be smacked down by the White House. You would think it safe to denounce enemy royalty but Mr. Roosevelt, the great democrat, flew into a public rage when OWI fell short of flattering that miserable little figurehead of the enemy, the King of Italy. Bracken has Churchill's confidence completely and everybody in England knows it.

It is, of course, not only Churchill's backing that makes Bracken effective. He is a shrewd, tough-minded fellow with the impish outspoken nature of Churchill himself. At luncheon or dinner Bracken goes into a monologue of indefinite duration filled with wit, wisdom, inside information, and ruthless debunking of British Colonel Blimps. His best monologue, however, is the one he gives about how every democracy should abolish its propaganda agencies and censorship offices the day war is over. He is the first bureaucrat I ever heard who didn't argue for his own immortality.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK — One afternoon in Rome, Frank Gervasi, of the International News, came around and said a friend of his named Jack Bozio, an ambitious and ingratiating second-string blackshirt with a press relations job at the foreign office, had been ordered to roust out some foreign and preferably, American journalists early the next morning and deliver them down to a resettlement project on the coast, where the bum, then known as Il Duce, had drained a swamp, allotted certain plots of land to his subjects, built houses and created a town called Pontinia. It sounded unappetizing but Gervasi said it would be a chance to see Il Bum doing his stuff and he felt sorry for Bozio, who was having a hard time rounding up talent.

Pegler

We arrived around nine, and found there, among the foreign journalists Sonia Tomara, a Russian with an almost unbelievable history of adventure in the Bolshevik revolution, who has since become an American and one of the great journalists of a great age of journalism. This girl's modesty is no less startling, incidentally, than her record of enterprise and courage.

Sonia was there, chumming around with Bozio who had an English education and a twittering manner, and there were some odds and ends of continental journalism, Nazis and hand-to-mouth Frenchmen, and a rusty, flat-heeled English number who didn't brush her hair but kept blowing it out of her mouth.

First they took us to a sort of community center, still smelling of French plaster, with a Fourth of July platform out front, draped with the colors and symbols of Fascism and tributes to Il Bum, for a very solemn (and it was solemn and sadder than anyone could find words to say) demonstration of the degradation of people and the exaltation of the state. They were collecting gold wedding rings from wives and even puckered old widows in poor black dresses and big muddy shoes, and all sorts of poor little gold and gilt trinkets which these people had treasured, to be boiled down for gold to back up the lire which then was worth, I believe, about four cents in the black market and about six cents in the regular exchange.

Some of the collections were brought up by little girls, others by very old women or hobbling cripples. Several old, old women came up and personally, with their knobby fingers, placed in the Duce's gloved palm gold medals for which their sons or husbands had died and he blinked and his soft eyes got wet as he said a few words. Each woman received an iron ring in exchange for her wedding ring, inscribed with the same patriotic motto. All this was a fraud, of course, because the gold in the whole catch wasn't enough to pay for the gas which brought our party down from Rome.

Then a blackshirt brought out big stacks of new paper money and, following some band music, Il Bum began awarding cash prizes to certain residents of the new community for raising the most potatoes, the most eggs, the most babies and pigs. As each winner's name was read off that one would mount the platform to receive several hundred lire from Il Bum, himself, and throw him the Fascist salute, which he returned with a snap of the heels of his expensive black leather boots.

Say what you will about the unwillingness of the Italians to live under Fascism but I will say that these people were loving it. Some of them were hysterical in their cheers for the posturing little punk on the platform.

All told, this development wasn't a patch on Miami Beach or any one of a hundred lesser projects of private enterprise in this country and yet so great it was in the Fascist scale of achievement that its dedication was a boisterous national event.

I mentioned that English number. Sonia and Gervasi said she had Fascism real bad and when, to cap the show for us, we were given a private glimpse of the great man in the new office of the local boss blackshirt, she took off her own wedding ring and with drooping head handed it over to the bum of bums.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

You Can't Print That!

(A compendium of tales that can't be told with names. If you find in them any resemblance to actual persons, living or dead—you've probably guessed right.)

THAT bar around the corner from the Winter Garden is one of the Main Stem's pleasant and picturesque places. It's not one of the modern bars, jammed to the doors with the school of drinkers who love to pay fancy prices for bad liquor; it's the old-fashioned type of saloon, with sawdust on the floor, good liquor, and an atmosphere of conviviality. Many a chorine from the Broadway musicals can be found there quaffing a quick one before or after the show.

Kilgallen

The other day a little drama was enacted in that bar. At one of the tables, two expensively dressed women sat drinking beer. Their faces were obscure in the dim light of the place, but if you'd been around Broadway long you might have recognized one of them as a Follies girl of a bygone day. Let's call her Alice.

She'd been a nice kid in her time, and like most of them, she'd had a tough struggle to make ends meet. Then her Cindrella story began to unfold. She met a millionaire who fell in love with her and married her. Their wedding hit the front pages and the Sunday magazine sections, and that was the last most people saw or heard of her . . . until the other day at the little bar around the corner from the Winter Garden.

Near her table sat four girls from the current Follies. They didn't recognize her, of course, but Alice spotted them as showgirls. The kids had emptied their purses and were pooling their money to pay for a couple rounds of beer. It was obvious that they were having a hard time making the money stretch.

Alice signalled a waiter and whispered to him. "See that those girls have everything they want, and put it on my bill."

Then she turned to her well-dressed friend. "See those kids?" she said. "They're struggling in show business, and it's a tough struggle. They have to count every penny, and they haven't got a dime left over when the rent is paid. I know, because I went through it."

She picked up her purse with a glitteringly jeweled hand and gathered her sables around her. "And do you know," she said softly, "I'd give everything I own to be back struggling with them."

But you can't print that. Because Alice's millionaire husband thinks she has everything she wants, and when she leaves home he assumes she's headed for the Colony or "21." He has no idea that she haunts a little saloon around the corner from the Winter Garden, and sits there day after day shuffling a pack of old dreams.

* * *

George and Kitty were a comedy team playing tank towns all over the country. You'd never see them unless you got stranded at a whistle stop between train connections and their routines were of the old burlesque variety that years later shot Abbott and Costello into prominence. Of course, they were in love, the way most vaudeville teams are at one time or another, but they decided not to marry until their big break came.

It came when a big Broadway agent caught their act by accident while he was killing some time. He went backstage and sold them on the idea of doing a guest appearance on the radio. It was for money, so it wasn't hard to sell.

The night of the radio appearance, Kitty was so nervous she developed a stutter and read her lines that way. But it didn't ruin the act—it made it. Listeners wrote in asking for more, and in a breathtakingly short space of time the kids from the Grade C vaudeville circuit had a contract for a regular radio show at a figure that was more like a phone number than a salary.

They wasted no time getting married. They capped their success with a wedding at the Little Church Around the Corner.

You know the rest. They became one of the funniest comedy teams in radio, and Mr. Morgenthau blessed them nightly. Then, out of the blue they got a divorce and split the act—because neither wanted to be the straight man and both wanted more than an even share of the funny lines. Now Kitty is still on top, but you seldom hear of George.

But you can't print that. George's agent is in the process of selling him to the movies as a "natural born" comedian, and he wouldn't want it spread around that what George really needs is ten or eleven good gag writers.

PROMISE JOBS TO ALL OHIO WAR VETERANS

Selective Service Leaders Agree Men To Get Work or Free Training.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Ohio war veterans have a promise of peacetime jobs after victory on world battlefronts.

Selective service will see that each honorably discharged veteran receives the same job he left, a comparable or better position or special training at government expense, asserts Capt. William E. Bartram, chief of the re-employment division.

The full power of the federal government backs up this promise, Bartram declared.

He reported the division already had helped rehabilitate more than 1,800 Ohio military personnel discharged because of physical disabilities.

"We first determine whether the person is physically able to handle his old job," Bartram explained. "If he is not, we see that he has an opportunity through vocational training and education, at government expense, to fit himself for a comparable or better job."

At the time of his discharge each member of the armed forces will fill out an occupational and educational record, and will indicate his preference as to type of work and where he wishes to locate.

If he wants his former job, the employer is required by law to return it to him, with full seniority rights, or "to a position of like seniority, status and pay unless the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make it impossible or unreasonable to do so."

If the employer refuses on the latter grounds, the ex-serviceman may appeal to the Ohio re-employment division and even to the federal court without cost. He also has the right to appeal if he is discharged without reasonable cause within a year after he returns to his former job.

Bartram said each of the state's 330 draft boards had a re-employment committeeman to act as the personal representative of all returning veterans.

OFL WEIGHING WAR POLICIES

Meeting In Columbus Likely To Urge Repeal of Anti-Strike Law.

COLUMBUS—Anti-strike legislation, price roll-backs, wage schedules, and other wartime policies vitally affecting labor were to be discussed as the 59th annual convention of the Ohio Federation of Labor opened in Columbus today.

A dozen AFL unions affiliated with the OFL are holding conventions or executive board meetings in conjunction with the week-long conclave of the parent body.

The 700 delegates will devote today's morning session to the business of getting the convention under way. This afternoon Michael J. Lyden, Youngstown, OFL president, will preside as Phil Hannah, secretary-treasurer who was unexpectedly endorsed by the Ohio Teamsters union as a candidate for governor, reports on the activities of the past year.

The federation is expected to take action during the week on resolutions calling for the repeal of the Smith-Connally anti-strike bill, revision of the little steel wage formula, a further roll-back in prices, and registration of all AFL members for voting at coming elections.

Hannah was endorsed unanimously for governor at the close of the two-day convention of the Teamsters.

EX-MANSFIELD RESIDENT DIES

Mrs. Violet Davis of Massillon, Left City 10 Years Ago.

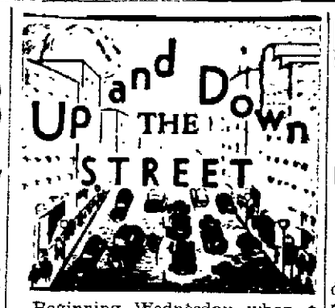
Mrs. Violet Davis, 59, widow of Thomas D. Davis, former residents of Mansfield, died yesterday at her home, 705 North avenue, Massillon.

The Davis family left Mansfield 10 years ago to locate in Massillon. She is survived by a daughter, Rosemary.

Funeral services are to be conducted Wednesday at 2 p. m. at the Arnold-Lynch funeral home. Burial will be in Canton cemetery.

GETS $1,000,000 CONTRACT

WASHINGTON — (AP) — A contract for construction costing more that $1,000,000 at a military installation in Trumbull county, O., has been awarded to Herman Holmes of Chrystal Falls, Mich., the war department announced.



Beginning Wednesday when a law passed by the Ohio state legislature goes into effect, certificates of title for house trailers will be required. The certificates will be the same as for other motor vehicles and will be issued from the county clerk of courts office. Prior to this time the bill of sale for a trailer was the only means of ownership identification, making the theft of a trailer easy and practically impossible to prove. The law provides for the same method of registration and proof of ownership as is now required for automobiles.

A woman, apparently injured, who said she had been "thrown from somewhere and I want to go to the hospital, had police puzzled for a while Saturday night. Officers found her at North Main street and Temple court about midnight. Questioning revealed that the woman lived at Handshoe, Ky., and had came to Mansfield recently from Akron where she had undergone treatment for a leg injury. Officers decided she didn't need further hospitalization that it might be best for her to go back to Handshoe as soon as she can get transportation. The Salvation Army arranged a room for her temporarily.

HUNT PAIR WHO FLED SLAYING

Police Seek White Man, Negro In Shooting of Girl War Worker.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—Police today sought a negro and a white man who were seen running from the scene only a few seconds after Mabel Easterday, 37-year-old Curtis-Wright worker, was shot to death in her room.

Other roomers said they heard Miss Easterday scream and then a single shot. They found her face down, still dressed in the dark blue slack suit she wore on the day shift, and a .32-caliber revolver bullet through her head.

Mrs. Edna Baker, operator of the rooming house, and a roomer, Mrs. Fannie Wells, were just turning into the house from the street when a negro ran from the side of the house, told them to "call the police, there's been a shooting," and then disappeared across the street.

The two women then saw a white man who ran back through the alley at the sight of them.

Mrs. Baker said that Miss Easterday, formerly a waitress who came to Columbus several years ago from Chillicothe, had several men friends but none who fit the jealous lover role. She had lived at the house for three years, although employed at the aircraft factory for only about four months.

Police theorized that Miss Easterday may have been slain as she surprised a thief in her room. Her purse recently had been stolen, they reported.

PLASTIC RATION TOKENS TO BE USED THIS YEAR

OPA Hurries Program, Plans To Issue Discs For Point 'Change' Before Jan. 1.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—An OPA spokesman today disclosed that American housewives will be using the new ration tokens — to be made of plastic—probably before Jan. 1, 1944, and said they will save the U. S. millions of dollars in paper and printing costs.

Use of the lightweight, quarter-size red and blue tokens, however, the spokesman emphasized, will not exclude the use of the present paper stamps, but instead will be used only as "change" for the point coupons now in effect.

Right now, it costs the government about $5,000,000 to print and distribute each type ration book, he said. Under the new system, for example, only four red stamps will be validated per ration period—each worth 15 points—compared with 16 stamps per period under the present program, causing an enormous cut in paper use.

When the token system goes into use, a new ration book will last 96 weeks — or nearly two years—instead of only about 20 weeks as they do now. In other words, the token-coupon system will make ration books last five times as long and save Uncle Sam about $25,000,000 over the same period of time in paper, labor and printing costs.

The tokens will be blue and red in color. For each color there will be two tokens—the larger one the size of a quarter and worth five points, and the smaller the size of a nickel and worth one point.

The tokens will be issued through the federal reserve system to banks participating in the rationing system.

Retailers will secure their tokens from the banks by exchanging ration currency and give them out to the consumer as change for ration stamps.

First time the housewife sees the new token will be at her retail grocery store or butcher shop, the spokesman said.

FOUND DEAD

David J. Fish, 55, Worked at Hughes-Keenan Plant.

David J. Fish, 55, Hughes-Keenan company employe who was found dead in bed this morning at a rooming house at 71 North Foster street, died from natural causes, Coroner L. B. McCullough said.

Mrs. Jessie Shambaugh, at whose home Fish roomed, told police she found him after he failed to get up to go to work.

Mr. Fish was a native of Escanaba, Mich., and was a veteran of the first World war. He was a member of the Eagles lodge and the Owls club.

A sister, Mrs. Angeline Fountaine, and a brother, Arthur Fish, both of Escanaba, survive.

The body was taken to the Wappner funeral home. Funeral arrangements are incomplete pending information from members of the family in Michigan.

NAZIS ADMIT TROOPS FLEE FROM KHARKOV

Russians Gain Control of Communications Key, Ukraine Opened.

hat will facilitate the movement of troops and supplies along the whole length of the southern front.

The German withdrawal was forced by flanking drives that cut all but one of six railroads radiating from Kharkov and narrowed their escape corridor to the southwest to 13 miles.

The next Russian move may be to swing strength to the Soviet bridgehead south of Izyum, 70 miles southeast of Kharkov, for a new drive to Lozovaya, 45 miles to the west, whose capture probably would compel the Germans to quit the remainder of the Donets basin because of the danger to their flank.

A Soviet success in this sector probably also would result in a German withdrawal from their bridgehead in the northwest Caucasus, the Crimea and rich farmlands east of the Dnieper line.

The summer offensive already has liberated thousands of square miles of harvest-ripe grain at a time when food is becoming an increasing problem in Russia.

Some 5,600 Germans were killed in fighting yesterday on the Kharkov front, a communique issued at Moscow said. More than 30 towns and villages were captured in advances of up to four miles on the Sumy area northwest of the city and other localities fell as Soviet columns that stormed across a river barrier north of Poltava.

Nearly 4,000 Germans were killed in heavy fighting above Poltava alone.

The Russians also were forging ahead in a new attack southwest of Voroshilovgrad, 170 miles southeast of Kharkov, in the Donets basin. Several villages were captured yesterday, 3,000 German infantrymen killed, 40 tanks destroyed and 21 Axis planes shot down in aerial combat.

The Soviet advance toward Bryansk on the central front slowed as the Red army bit into the core of the enemy's hedgehog defense system. In one sector, however, the Russians killed all 300 troops in a German garrison which refused to surrender a town.

Southwest of Spas Demensk, 80 miles north of Bryansk, the Russians killed 1,500 Germans and wrecked 15 tanks in repulsing two nazi attacks on a newly-captured height, then pursued the retreating enemy and improved their positions. Red air force pilots shot down 11 German aircraft in dogfights.

ern road to Japan," Admiral Kinkaid said.

"Our chain of air and naval bases will protect our surface vessels and shipping units two-thirds of the way to Tokyo."

Gen. Butler declared the way was now open for the operation of a multiple-jawed pincer closing on the enemy in the Pacific.

DeWitt expressed the belief the Japanese completed their withdrawal on Aug. 8, escaping in submarines or barges, and added that he thought it doubtful that many ever reached land.

The American task force landing on Kiska Aug. 15 found the enemy had fled and took undisputed possession.

Kinkaid said U. S. surface craft shelled "objects" in the fog at night "after the Japanese began their evacuation of Kiska," and added that "we believe we sank some of their ships, but this cannot be confirmed."

This was the first indication that the Japanese may have been attacked in their flight—a flight which marked the first time they had abandoned the Samurai warrior code and failed to stand their ground to the death.

A Tokyo broadcast, unconfirmed by Allied sources, asserted that Japanese troops defending Kolombangara island, a few miles north of New Georgia "foiled landing attempts by United States forces at dawn yesterday."

The broadcast said the landing attempt was made by about 15 barges and torpedo boats.

Reds Call for Use Of 'English Base'

MOSCOW — (AP) — Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, said today that the British Isles should be "the main base for invasion of the continent.

"A crushing blow upon Germany is almost impossible to conceive without utilizing the enormous strategic advantage of the British Isles," Pravda asserted.

Invasion from England, the newspaper added, could be supported by a strong aerial fighter force as well as army and navy bombers. It estimated 20 times fewer ships would be required to land and supply forces in western Europe than would be needed for an invasion from the Mediterranean.

Reviewing England's wartime economy, Pravda said:

"Absence of a second front on the European continent has created a disproportion between the armament industry and the size of the operations being waged. . . . The very logic of military economics requires the use of the equipment produced."

Pravda estimated England has 7,000,000 men in her armed forces and a similar number in war industries, producing 3,000 planes and 2,000 tanks a month to surpass German production. "A further increase in 1943 is possible only through higher efficiency," the newspaper said.

Pravda declared at one point that the Soviet Union had saved England from invasion.

SLAIN IN DUEL

Crazed Negro Shot After He Kills Police Captain.

CINCINNATI —(INS)— Patrolman Leroy Brown of the Cincinnati police force remained in a critical condition today from wounds received in a gun battle in which Police Capt. George B. Dooley, 52, was killed by an insane negro, Jesse Anderson, 40, who in turn was killed by police gunfire.

Brown and Dooley were felled by a fusillade when they investigated a complaint by Anderson's sister that her brother had threatened to kill her. When the policemen arrived, Anderson began shooting without a word.

Shortly after the shooting, gas bombs forced the negro from an outhouse where he had barricaded himself. As he emerged, he was shot six times in the head and body, police said.

CONFERS ABOUT PSYCHOPATHICS

Bricker Says 16 Sent To Institutions From Cleveland.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Gov. John W. Bricker said today he had conferred with welfare leaders about caring for Cleveland psychopathics and was told that 16 had been admitted to state institutions in recent days.

A demand that the state take immediate action to house all psychopathics developed in Cleveland following the slaying 10 days ago of James and Charles Collins, 13-year-old twins. Henry Hagert, 17, charged with first degree murder in the deaths, was released from a psychopathic ward shortly before the twins were slain.

Finds T-B Causes Most Fatalities Between 15-34

NEW YORK— (U.P.) —Tuberculosis is the leading cause of death in the age-bracket from 15 to 34 years, states the American Journal of Public Health in its current issue.

The Journal further points out that young women run a greater risk than young men of becoming tubercular and on the basis of data gathered by Dr. Lewis J. Moorman of Oklahoma City, the President of the National Tuberculosis Assn. the publication warns that young women going into industry should be aware of the hazards of tuberculosis.

"Actually, girls going into industry tend to believe that they acquire ruggedness by virtue of donning pants and getting their faces dirty," the Journal comments. "This attitude calls for sound and far-reaching instruction as to diet, rest, the danger of time-and-a-half and double time."

While the ratio of deaths due to tuberculosis is highest among those persons over 5 years of age, the number of fatalities caused by the ailment is greatest among the young.

"In the most productive period of life," the journal states, "tuberculosis continues to cause more deaths than any other one disease."

Promises More Air Power In China

NEW DELHI, Aug. 22 — (Delayed)—(AP)—Increased American air forces and equipment to put weight behind the aid to China was promised by Maj. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer today at his first press conference since his appointment as commander of the Tenth U. S. AAF.

The general said that coordination of air activities in the China-India theater was the first step in the job of actually delivering increased help to China.

Admit Nazis Block Italian Peace Move

BERN—(AP)—An open admission that Italian efforts to withdraw from the war are being blocked by German pressure on the Badoglio government was contained in the Italian press for the first time during the week-end.

A Swiss telegraph agency dispatch from Chiasso on the Italian frontier said the Italian press is "clearly stating that the first aim of the Badoglio government is to remove the country from war, but Rome is seeking to prevent the peninsula from becoming the theater of a gigantic battle among the Germans there, and the Anglo-Saxons threatening to enter."

This theme, it was said, also was set forth at conferences held by Minister of Industry Leopold Piccardi with workers in heavily-bombed Milan, Turin and Genoa, who were told that the people's wish for peace has been blocked by "enormous difficulties."

SEAMEN CRAVE MUSIC AND MAIL

PORTLAND, Ore.—(INS)—Music and mail—these are the things navy men want most, according to Charles W. Haller, seaman first class, who has fought the Japanese from Pearl Harbor to the Solomons and back to America.

"It's hard to get any records of music in the South Pacific," Haller said after 21 months at sea. "Records with recent tunes are very rare. Most of them are broken when they arrive because of improper packing."

Haller was on watch on the U.S.S. Nevada when Jap planes attacked Pearl Harbor. The battleship was among the vessels put out of action in the raid.

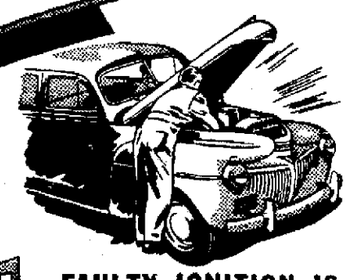
What to do about YOUR CAR

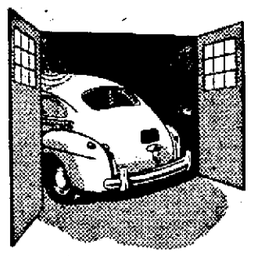
Depend on your nearby Plymouth, Dodge, De Soto or Chrysler dealer for reliable, economical service. He has equipment and tools to detect and correct troubles before costly repairs are necessary. He has factory-engineered and inspected parts designed for your car. You'll find his name and address in the Classified Telephone Directory.



MANY BIG LITTLE THINGS ARE UNDER YOUR CAR'S HOOD . . .

Your service man knows what to watch there. Let him check up regularly.

CARS SUFFER FROM "STILLWEAR," TOO



Cars are built to run . . . not to stand idle. "Stillwear" may develop when cars are put away or used only for short trips. Regardless of mileage driven, see that your car gets regular lubrication and battery check-ups. It pays . . . for the short run as well as the "long."

FAULTY IGNITION IS WASTEFUL

For maximum economy, proper spark setting is necessary. Clean and correctly adjusted distributor points are also essential to quick starting and smooth operation.

IT'S HARD TO DETECT THIS YOURSELF

Old mufflers give little warning before they "blow." While getting a check-up on your car, have its muffler inspected.

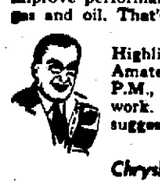
MOPAR MUFFLERS

MOPAR mufflers are designed for extreme quietness on Plymouth, Dodge, De Soto or Chrysler cars, and Dodge trucks. They're welded for long life.

IS YOUR CAR A HEAVY SMOKER?

WORN PISTON RINGS MAY BE THE CAUSE

Your car's exhaust pipe is the clue to trouble. If it smokes unduly, oil is probably being wasted. Chances are that worn piston rings are the offenders. New MOPAR piston rings improve performance . . . save both gas and oil. That's economy.



Highlight of the week . . . Major Bowes Amateur Program every Thursday, 9 P.M., Eastern War Time, over CBS network. Take advantage of his friendly suggestions on car care.

REMEMBER MOPAR BATTERIES

Do you like the results the Allies are getting? Your war bonds are making them possible. Buy some more!

It is charged that the state liquor department paid more for liquor than the same brands brought from permit holders—but what's unusual about the state doing business that way?

It is always dangerous for children to hitchhike, or to go anywhere with strangers, but especially so just now when cities are plagued by more than an ordinary number of irresponsible drifters. Children are safer with one or more acquaintances, and home is the best place for them at night.

Japan's Withdrawal From Kiska

WHEN Japan seized Attu and Kiska in the Aleutians, in June, 1942, the Nipponese forces were in the midst of a victorious drive which, for a time, offered serious threat to our west coast.

The United States was poorly prepared for the unexpected attack on Pearl Harbor and for the fast-moving Japanese aggressive action that followed during the early months of last year.

Great Britain was too much engaged in the European phases of the war, and in battling for self-preservation, to divert sufficient strength to the Far East to provide a serious obstacle to the Jap rush toward India.

By now, however, there has been a considerable change in the situation and the latent war strength of the United States is beginning to show in the Pacific as well as in the extent of aid to Great Britain and Russia.

Voluntary departure of enemy forces from Kiska, following the recapture of Attu, can mean only that Jap militarists have finally recognized the futility of earlier ambitious plans for invasion of the North American continent and realize the necessity of strengthening defenses nearer home.

The impression is quite general that much of the Quebec conference has been given to discussion of future moves against Japan and while the evacuation of Kiska may be considered a minor incident, it is being noted that this marks the first voluntary withdrawal of Japan from occupied territory, which indicates that suicidal resistance may not hereafter be the fixed pattern of Jap warfare.

While next moves are shrouded in military secrecy, it seems not unlikely—as Japan is driven further and further away from this continent—that Wake island, which has sentimental as well as military value, will pop into the news as the scene for reversal of the Japanese triumph over a small defending garrison in December, 1941.

Neglect at Liberty Park

REMEMBERING the fine send-off that was given at the opening of Liberty park a few years ago and recognizing the excellent service this attractive recreational spot is performing in the northeast section of Mansfield, it must be wondered why the roadway leading into this park has been left in such miserable condition during the entire summer as to make it not only disreputable in appearance but hazardous to automobiles, and especially to precious tires.

The winter's accumulation of chuckholes on Grace street, which gives access to Liberty park, were repaired earlier in the summer but nothing was done about the deep holes in the driveway entering the park and the season is nearing an end without any indication of intent on the part of the city, or anyone else, to look after this ordinary part of necessary public park upkeep.

Those interested in the operation and improvement of this park say the matter has been taken up with various city officials but that responsibility for repair of the park roadway is disclaimed.

Intention of this mention is to raise the point of who, if not the city, is responsible for maintenance of public parks in usable condition. Very little material and labor would be required to care for repairs on the park driveway sufficient to bridge over to the end of this season, but who is to take the initiative in doing it?

Tavern Keepers Promise Clean-Up

A CITY which has hundreds of soldiers and sailors wandering through its streets in the evenings has been having trouble, as most cities do, with cafes and taverns where harpies gather to rid fighting men of their pay.

The mayor decided that ordinary policing wouldn't do much good, and that cracking down would only drive dangers under cover. So he called into conference the operators of all down-town places where food and drink were served. The safety director explained that the armed services were making an increasing number of complaints and that it wouldn't take much more to put the city "out of bounds."

The tavern operators talked it over quietly and came to an agreement to "keep their places free of persons who endanger the health, welfare and morals of the men in the service of the United States." They will limit the quantity of liquor sold to service men, so the boys do not lose responsibility for their actions. They will promote harmony between civilians and service men so there will be no friction.

They then authorized the appointment of committees of "reliable and sensible men" who would thoroughly investigate all complaints and keep close watch on restaurants and cafes.

This is good American procedure if followed through. It puts prevention of misbehavior into the hands of people directly concerned.

Much Depends On Secretaries

BEHIND many a successful business executive lurks his efficient but unseen secretary. This is also true of the White House. Many a president's course has run more smoothly because of an efficient private secretary. The recent death of C. Bascom Slemp, who was Coolidge's right hand man for two years, a man of much political shrewdness, is a reminder of this fact.

Curiously enough, in view of the importance of the office, few presidential secretaries have attained fame afterwards. While John Hay, later secretary of state, began his career as Lincoln's secretary, the position was then one of minor importance.

Little was made of the office before the day of George B. Cortelyou, secretary to President McKinley. He stepped from that position into Theodore Roosevelt's cabinet, and later became president of the Consolidated Gas Company of New York City. Since Cortelyou it is hard to recall even the names of some holders of the position.

ANOTHER BIG STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

Vision Changes In Automobiles, Safer, Easier Driving Predicted

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Pleasure of driving will be emphasized in the post-war era, some automobile executives believe. The models now being planned for the years of peace should be the ultimate in simplicity of operation, comfort, and utility.

The brake probably will be a simple little push-button affair, with no gear-shifting. These models would not be built for speed. The airplane has captured that element of travel. Those who want to go places in a super rush, just won't depend on their cars.

For these new models, new highways would be built, special touring highways, similar to those which were laid out in Europe, where trucks and commercial traffic will be barred. These sweeping highways would eliminate dangerous crossings and intersections as far as possible.

The fun, these men believe, has been lost in driving in the maze of regulations, ordinances, licenses, trucks, and buses which have held a heavy hand over the everyday pleasure driver.

There is some dispute over the engine location in these models. William Stout, the inventor, claims that it will be most practical to mount the engines over the rear of the chassis.

Tommy Milton, two-time winner of the 500-mile Memorial Day classics at Indianapolis, scoffs at the drive idea. He recalls that Harry Miller built a number of rear-drive speedsters to participate in the automobile derby, but none of them panned out very well. Still others reserve their opinion, expecting that most anything can happen in engineering and inventive research. To date the rear drive has not proven itself to be practical.

* * *

SMALLER and lighter cars will be built after the war, getting away from the high-priced heavy models which had the virtue of holding the road. These models will utilize plastics to a considerable extent in framework.

Because of their lightness, they will make it possible for drivers to get 50 and perhaps more miles per gallon. Before the war this factor was given scant consideration in the purchase or appraisal of a car.

Right after the war, at least, cars which can show the best records along this line, will be mighty popular. Gas rationing has made every motorist conscious of the gas consumption of his vehicle and this influence will hold over for some time.

It is suggested that the super highways for pleasure be financed by fees, a sort of a toll bridge proposition, similar to that plan used in Europe. This would enable these highways to liquidate themselves. Those who used them would be paying for them. The driver would pay a fee and then he would have clear sailing ahead. No trucks or buses to dodge and he would have the maximum in driving safety in the design and layout of these highways.

AUTOMOBILE men point out that aviation has learned a lot from their industry, even though the plane is certain to become increasingly popular for transportation and travel. A lot of the young fellows who have earned their wings during this war will want to have small planes of their own during the post-war era. Helicopters and small planes are likely to be available for civilian utilization.

It is pointed out that aviation can thank the 500-mile Indianapolis race for several mechanical improvement. Superchargers, of the design now part of the equipment of all stratosphere planes, were first used in this race.

The higher cylinder head pressure, now utilized in all aircraft motors, was developed in this racing event. The automobile race was used as a proving ground for many radical and advanced ideas for developing greater speed and efficiency in gasoline motors.

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Keeping On the Job

PERHAPS a dozen men who work on the same floor of the shop, as I do—in the new defense job which I started three weeks ago—are nearing or have passed their sixtieth milestone. More than half, at least some time in their lives, have been farmers.

These men are always on time and when the gong for quitting sounds, they drop their tools, as others do, but reluctantly. All day they labor through, nailing, carrying lumber, proudly stacking away the finished product—completed panels of roof for portable buildings.

I asked one tall spare fellow, who I understand has passed three score and ten, how he liked his job. He is a clean-cut man, with a kindly face. He twinkled graciously at me and answered. "Fine . . . oh, yes, I get tired, of course. But next morning I'm ready to get back at it again."

Another who came on two weeks ago, drives 20 miles from down our way. He has a watch, which gives him a certain adeptness at "passing the time of day" . . . a certain social advantage among his fellows. He can make such a small remark as "Five o'clock" sound important. Others take up his word, and send it buzzing and relaying up and down between the hammer beats.

"Us old fellows wouldn't have jobs if the boys weren't away," remarked one to me, with a sly smile. "But they're in the war, and this job is sure ours while it lasts. . . . We hope that won't be long! If this work we're doing makes 'em more comfortable in Alaska or the Aleutians or Iceland or wherever Uncle Sam needs shelter, we're all for doing a darn good job. Looking at it that way, every nail a man drives—every roof panel he puts out, means more."

These men do not need a boss to urge them on. Their constant, steady, honest toil merits recognition. Why do they work when they are old? Money is not the only, nor do I think the chief, incentive. There is a strange atrophy when one grows old in idleness. There is a healthy glow to being useful and filling a small place well.

These are men. Hard handed, straight spitting grandfathers—heavy hammering men—"driving nails into Hitler's coffin."

U. S. Air Forces Maintain High Morale, Despite Losses In Raids

WASHINGTON—Officials of the U. S. Air Forces operating over Europe are maintaining a high morale among the fliers in the face of daily losses of scores of their comrades.

Official communiques report only the number of planes lost on a given flight. They fail to mention that when ten Flying Fortresses go down, 100 men go down with them.

This not only requires replacements, but also requires that the men who survive shall not brood too much over their friends.

Officials calculate the chances of survival, just as the men do, and they regulate the flights to keep those chances favorable. No flier is kept on operations for more than 25 or 30 flights, depending on the percentage of losses.

Also, officials take pains to keep the mess halls filled. If 50 men fail to return from a raid, they make sure that there will not be 50 empty chairs at mess.

A high official of the war department, just back from a tour of the air fronts, reports that morale is good among the fliers.

"If you sent them out against heavy opposition to bomb a truck by the roadside," he said, "they might not be so keen about it, but these boys know the importance of their targets, and their fighting spirit is high."

One officer, a squadron leader, suffered an injury to his foot, which was put in a plaster cast. But he hobbled out of the hospital, without being discharged, and made four flights over Europe with his crew, before attendants discovered his trick and took him back to bed.

B and C Books Down.

SOME Eastern motorists looking forward to more gasoline next month have a sad disappointment ahead. The OPA is planning to offset any increase in consumption. For while the value of A coupons will go up, the number of B and C coupons will go down, and the one move will offset the other.

Trimming of B and C books will be done by instructions from Washington to local boards directing that applications for these supplementary rations shall be scrutinized more carefully and the number of coupons reduced.

Reports of OPA investigators reveal that some local boards are too liberal in granting supplementary rations. This is especially true in small communities where board members know applicants personally and do not like to police their driving too sharply.

It is also true in oil producing states, where the necessity of sharp reduction has not yet been universally realized.

Thus, when you get your next B or C ration book, you may find that the board has used the scissors before passing the book on to you.

Ludwig's Warning.

EMIL LUDWIG, famous German author and biographer, recently had an unique session with the Army's School for Military Government at Charlottesville, Va., as to what the Allies should do with Germany after the war.

Ludwig gave a series of lectures on how to prevent another Hitler from arising and plunging the world into another war 20 years hence.

Based upon years of studying Bismarck, Hindenburg and the kaiser, the German historian urged that there be a strong army of occupation by all the United Nations for at least five years.

"The German people should know for the first time in 130 years," he said, "what a foreign authority looks like. Only thus can they be brought to understand that they have been defeated."

Ludwig pointed out that German militarism always had come from Prussia, while Germany's culture had come from the South and West. Therefore he proposed spliting Germany up into two states: (1) Prussia, small and isolated; and (2) Bavaria, Saxony, and the smaller Catholic German states which are not militaristic and which would be joined with Austria. This would put the Catholics in one country and the Lutheran Prussians in another.

No "Misguided" Germans.

"LEAVE to the Germans all that other nations have," Ludwig recommended, "but take away their weapons, supervise their education, and give them political guardianship. If you do not, and if you speak of the 'poor misguided German people,' then 20 years from now your sons will be fighting another war against them.'

"What I fear," continued Ludwig, "is that on the day after the death of Hitler, the Junkers, the generals will kowtow to you and say, "We love Americans. Come, let us be brothers again.' I fear that some of you will say, 'Now let us make peace. They are good people, these generals.'

"But they are not. They are not one whit better than the Hitlers. They merely have better manners," Ludwig declared.

Note: Ludwig paid tribute privately to the excellent job the army was doing at its School for Military Government. He said he had seldom met such an intelligent, progressive group of men, with such a grasp on the world's future problems.

King and Airpower.

THE WASHINGTON POST has been engaged in on argument with the navy and Admiral Ernest King, commander-of-the-fleet, over whether he is really for airpower or still puts his faith in the big battleship.

The Post repeated from William Bradford Huie's book "The Fight for Air Power," a quotation from King that "Army aviation should end at the shore-line." Admiral King promptly replied that he never made such a statement.

Maybe he didn't but . . . After the battle of Midway, Fortune Magazine was preparing an article on airpower, and the proof sheets were sent to Admiral King for perusal. When they came back, he had written marginal notes in his own handwriting deprecating the achievements of army airplanes at Midway. Where the manuscript said that army airplanes bombed Jap ships, the doughty Admiral had pencilled "Bombed at Jap ships." Then followed the initials "E. J. K."

Note: It was largely censored at the time, but before Pearl Harbor, army planes were not permitted to fly more than 100 miles on patrol duty over the water. For weeks the army argued that long-range army planes, faster and further-flying than the navy's should keep a lookout for a surprise Jap attack. Major General Bob Olds among others, even made a chart showing how a Jap carrier could sneak in at night after navy planes had finished their rounds, without the navy being able to detect it. But Admiral King's navy remained adamant. Army planes, they said, must stick to the shore.

Dave Boone Says:

I figure a second front will be opened pretty soon now in Europe and that it won't be in Italy. Leave Italy to the Germans and that will hasten the Italian desire for peace faster than anything we can do. If we get into Italy, too, the folks there will split their hostility between us and the Nazis. But if we keep out, except for air raids, they'll give all their hate to Hitler.

Whenever Churchill and Roosevelt stage a huddle with all the fanfare of the Quebec meeting it means poison for the Axis. This coupled with our warning to Europe's subjugated peoples to be ready for underground co-operation, meahs big doings are at hand.

ERNIE PYLE Roving Reporter

General Bradley Regarded By Associates As "Fairest Man They've Ever Known."

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY—(By Wireless)—Men who work under Lieutenant General Omar N. Bradley say he is the fairest man they have ever known. There is absolutely no pretense about him in any way, and he hates ostentation.

He doesn't fly his three-star flag except when formal occasions compel it. And his aides are full of stories about how he has hung in the background rather than call attention to himself by pushing up where he had a right to be. He doesn't even own a Sam Browne belt or a dress cap.

Oddly enough, for a man as quiet and modest as he is, he doesn't mind public speaking. He is no ringing orator, but after you listen to him for a while his speech becomes powerful by its tone of intense sincerity.

During vital periods of each campaign the General always comes to our correspondents' camp and, in front of a big map, gives us a complete fill-in on the situation. When he first did this we all liked him but weren't especially impressed. But he grew on us just as he grows on everybody he works with, and today there isn't a correspondent who doesn't swear by him.

DESPITE his mildness the General is not what you would call easygoing. Nobody runs over him. He has complete confidence in himself, and once he makes up his mind nothing sways him. He is as resolved as rock, and people who work with him must produce or get out. They don't get the traditional army bawling-out from him, but they get the gate.

He has a nice quality of respecting other people's opinions and of paying close attention to other people's conversation. I have noticed that when he makes a phone call he always says "if you please" to the army operator.

And on the road, when an army truck pulls out to let his three-star jeep pass, he always turns and says "Thank you" to the driver.

When he passes a bunch of engineers toiling and sweating to create a bypass around a blown-up bridge he calls out, "You're doing a nice job here," to the startled lieutenant in charge.

The General rides around the front a great deal. During the campaign in northern Sicily he averaged five hours a day in his jeep, and sometimes ran it up to eight. He laughs and says jeep riding is good for the liver.

A few times he used planes. He hopes to have a small plane of his own that will land practically anywhere, as it would save him hours each day.

On the front bumper of the General's jeep is a red-and-white plate displaying three stars, and of course this draws a salute from every officer or soldier who is on his toes. In heavy traffic the General is returning salutes constantly. I told him that what he need most was a little boy to do his saluting for him. He laughed and said, "Oh, that's the way I get my exercise."

When he drives through a town the Sicilians all yell and wave, and the General waves back. Italian policemen, discharged soldiers and even civilians snap up to the salute, and the General always salutes them back. Once in a while they give him the fascist salute, out of old habit, and he returns that too but in the American way.

He doesn't affect a swagger stick, but he does sometimes carry an ordinary wooden cane with a steel spike in the end. It was given to him by former Congressman Faddis of Pennsylvania.

ALMOST every day he visits the headquarters of each division that is in the lines. He says he could do the work by telephone, but by going in person he can talk things over with the whole division staff, and if they are planning something he doesn't think is good he can talk them around to seeing it his way, rather than just flatly ordering it done.

I stood with him one day on a high observation post looking ahead at a town where we were having very tough going. The Germans simply wouldn't crack. (They did later, of course). All of our officers, including the general, were worried. He said:

"We've put enough pressure on already to break this situation, but still they hang on, so we'll have to figure out some other way. Some commanders believe in the theory of direct attack, accepting a 30% loss of men and getting to your objective quickly, but I've tried to figure a plan for this to save as many lives as possible."

I said to him, "I never could be a general. I couldn't stand up under the responsibility of making a decision that would take human lives."

And he said: "Well, you don't sleep any too well from it. But we're in it now, and we can't get out without some loss of life. I hate like the devil to order the bombing of a city, and yet it sometimes simply has to be done."

In speaking of being bombed and of enduring the sadness of our own casualties, he said:

"It's really harder on some of the newer officers than it is on me. For although I don't like it, after all I've spent thirty years preparing a frame of mind for accepting such a thing."
